Abstract	The increase of refugee status claiming immigrants in Canada has led to a review of the immigration policy concerning this group. This report looks at the weaknesses of current legislation which is linked to the Geneva Convention and its Protocol, studying Canada's past adherence to the rights afforded under its protection. Also discusses public and government opinion on support for a humanitarian and generous refugee policy and questions of balancing efficiency with procedural fairness to claimants. Gives a chronology of events since 1969.

Introduction

The Canadian Research Index - Microlog puts all of Canada's hard-to-find government and research literature at your fingertips. Canadian Research Index in print is a monthly indexing and abstracting service. An electronic version on CD-ROM or via the Internet is also available. Microlog represents our fulltext document service. Most titles included in Canadian Research Index are available in paper as well as microfiche format. Together, these services are a powerful tool for finding Canadian report publications.

The Canadian Research Index includes scientific and technical research papers in physical, natural and social sciences. It also includes policy papers, important statistical publications, and annual reports.

Documents issued in English or French are catalogued, indexed and abstracted in the language of the publication, while bilingual documents are catalogued, indexed and abstracted in both languages.

Every effort is made to ensure the currency of the index. For instance, documents appearing in the checklist of Canadian Government Publications are delivered by the Microlog Service approximately two months after publication of the list.

SOURCES

- government publications from the federal, provincial and municipal levels
- depository publications of reference value
- non-depository publications issued by government organizations, laboratories and research centres
- non-profit organizations, educational institutions and research groups
- some monographs and serials issued by Statistics Canada

ORGANIZATION

Canadian Research Index comprises the following sections:

Titles and abstracts: A full bibliographic citation and a descriptive abstract for each title.

Corporate name index: Access by controlled format corporate names based on Canadiana Authorities.

Personal name index: Access by personal name.

Subject index: Subject terms based on Library of Congress and Canadian Subject Headings are assigned to each document. A cross-referencing structure assists searchers.

Series titles: Lists by title and numbers all reports in a series; series are available as an on-going subscription or retrospective collection.

Microfiche collections: Lists contents of each fiche collection for quick reference. These collections can be used as current awareness lists in broad subject areas to notify users of new acquisitions.

ELECTRONIC ACCESS

The full Canadian Research Index file from 1982 to date is available in electronic formats on the SilverPlatter SPIRS platform. It is accessible on CD; it may be licensed for network use on a local server or on a SilverPlatter ERL server; and it is available for Internet subscription. Reports may be ordered through the National Technical Information Service in the U.S.A., or directly through Micromedia's Technical Information Centre. All catalogued documents issued by Statistics Canada are now included in electronic versions of Canadian Research Index. For information, contact Micromedia's CD Centre at 1-800-387-2689.

DOCUMENT DELIVERY

The unique Microlog Accession Number is the key to immediate retrieval of any document. Most documents cited in Canadian Research Index are available as part of the Microlog Microfiche Subscription Service, institutions may subscribe to complete or partial collections of the documents in the Index. Individual copies on microfiche or paper reprints may be ordered through Micromedia's Document Delivery Service. To order, please contact:

Introduction

Microlog : Index de recherche du Canada met à votre disposition toutes les publications du gouvernement et les travaux de recherche difficiles à se procurer. L'Index de recherche du Canada imprimé est un service mensuel d'indexation et de résumés. Une version électronique est également offerte sur CD-ROM ou dans Internet. Microlog représente notre service de documents en texte intégral. La plupart des titres figurant dans l'Index sont disponibles sous forme imprimée et sur microfiche. Ces services combinés constituent un outil très efficace pour retrouver les publications des différents gouvernements du Canada.

L'Index contient entre autres des recherches en sciences physiques, naturelles et sociales, des énoncés de politique, des statistiques et des rapports annuels.

Les ouvrages publiés en français ou en anglais sont indexés et résumés dans la langue de publication; les ouvrages bilingues sont traités dans les deux langues.

De vastes efforts sont déployés pour assurer la pertinence de l'index. Par exemple, on peut obtenir les documents qui figurent sur la Liste des publications du gouvernement du Canada environ deux mois après leur parution sur cette liste.

SOURCES

- publications fédérales, provinciales et municipales
- publications déposées servant de référence
- publications non déposées publiées par les organismes gouvernementaux, les laboratoires et les centres de recherche
- publications d'organismes à but non lucratif, d'établissements d'enseignement et de groupes de recherche
- certaines monographies et publication en série publiées par Statistique Canada

ORGANISATION DE L'INDEX

Titres et résumés: tous les titres sont catalogués et accompagnés d'un résumé descriptif.

Index des dénominations sociales: donne un accès par dénominations sociales fondées sur les vedettes d'autorité du service Canadiana.

Index des noms: donne un accès par auteur.

Index des matières: des descripteurs fondés sur les vedettes matières des documents Library of Congress Subject Headings et Canadian Subject Headings sont associés à chaque publication; un réseau de renvois facilite la recherche.

Titres de collections: tous les rapports publiés en série sont classés par titre et numéro. Ces documents sont disponibles par le biais d'un abonnement permanent et ils sont aussi intégrés à une collection rétrospective.

Collections de microfiches: chaque collection apparaît dans une section séparée pour faciliter la recherche. Ces listes peuvent aussi servir à renseigner les usagers sur les nouveautés.

ACCÈS ÉLECTRONIQUE

Le fichier complet de l'Index de recherche du Canada, de 1982 à aujourd'hui, est disponible sous forme électronique à partir de la plate-forme SilverPlatter SPIRS. Il est offert sur CD-ROM et il est possible d'obtenir des licences d'utilisation en réseau pour un serveur local ou pour un serveur SilverPlatter ERL. Il est également disponible par le biais d'un abonnement Internet. Les rapports peuvent être commandés par l'intermédiaire du National Technical Information Service aux États-Unis ou encore directement au Centre d'information technique de Micromedia. Tous les documents catalogués publiés par Statistique Canada sont intégrés dans les versions électroniques de l'Index de recherche du Canada. Pour plus de détails, contactez le personnel de Micromedia au 1 800 387-2689.

LIVRAISON DE DOCUMENTS

Le numéro d'accès unique de Microlog est la clé qui permet de repérer immédiatement tout document. La majorité des documents cités dans l'Index de recherche du Canada sont offerts par le service d'abonnement aux microfiches de Microlog. Les organismes peuvent s'abonner à l'ensemble ou à certaines des collections de documents de l'Index. On peut également commander des reproductions de documents sur microfiches ou sur papier par l'intermédiaire du service de livraison de documents de Micromedia. Pour commander, communiquer avec:

Sample CRI Search

"How can a person from a foreign country qualify for refugee status in Canada?"

The researcher can search in CRI as in any library catalogue - by subject, author and title.
Because the index is bilingual, searching can be done in English or in French.

Recherche type avec IRC

"Comment une personne d'un pays étranger peut-elle demander le statut de réfugié au Canada?"

La méthode de recherche dans IRC est la même que dans une bibliothèque, puisque les documents sont indexés par auteur, par sujet et par titre. L'index étant bilingue, la consultation peut se faire en français ou en anglais.

STEP 2/DEUXIÈME ÉTAPE

A unified search strategy

The search strategy should include all the monthly issues. Start with the most recent issue and work back.
Monthly issues are cumulated annually.

Établir une stratégie de recherche unifiée

La stratégie de recherche doit tenir compte de toutes les publications mensuelles, à commencer par les plus récentes. Chaque année, ces publications font l'objet d'une refonte.

STEP 3/TROISIÈME ÉTAPE

Retrieve the publication

Each bibliographic citation gives a full description of the relevant document. Locate the document by the microfiche number in the library's collection or order from Micromedia. Individual publications are available for purchase on microfiche or paper. The bibliographic description provides publisher source information.

Repérer la publication

Chaque notice bibliographique comprend une description complète du document; celui-ci peut être repéré grâce au numéro de microfiche de la bibliothèque; sinon, il faut le commander à Micromedia. On peut se procurer les monographies sur microfiches ou sur papier. La description bibliographique comporte également des indications sur l'éditeur.

1994-95 inventory of transit research and development

Toronto : Canadian Urban Transit Assn, Research & Development Program, 1995. 94 p. (Report / Canadian Urban Transit Assn. Research & Development Program ; RD 95-2) ISBN 0-920559-44-1 MICROLOG 97-03523 (2 fiche)

This report represents an inventory of urban transit research and development (R&D) activities that were completed and/or underway during the calendar year. The purpose of this inventory is to provide a brief overview of ongoing R&D in Canada. Projects have been grouped into categories of similar activity. Each project description includes the following essential information: project title; project description, including objectives and status; organizations involved in the project, either for its funding or its conduct; and key contact person for further information.

The 1995 British Columbia assessment of mathematics and science : technical report

Authors: Michael A. Marshall... et al. Victoria : Ministry of Education, Skills & Training, Examinations & Assessment Branch, 1996. x, 538 p. : ill., Bibl. ISBN 0-7726-3055-0 MICROLOG 97-03497 (6 fiche)

Presents findings from an assessment conducted to address a number of questions related to British Columbia student attitudes and achievements in mathematics and science (grades 4, 7, and 10), and to examine the classroom practices and perceptions of teachers of these subjects. Included in the design of the assessment was provision for reporting of results at school, district, and provincial levels. The timing of the assessment enabled combination of achievement items from earlier assessments with achievement assessments from the third International Mathematics and Science Study, allowing not only for potential comparisons of change in student achievement over time, but also for comparisons with national and international results. Most of the chapters of this report contain the assessment data and their interpretation, including student characteristics, attitudes and opinions, comparisons with 1990 and 1991 provincial assessments, and summaries of teacher questionnaires. Technical aspects of the assessment process are also discussed.

1997-98 estimates, part I : the government expenditure plan and highlights by ministry

Canada. Dept. of Finance. Ottawa : Supply & Services Canada, Canada Communication Group, Publishing, 1997. 44, 48 p.
MICROLOG 97-03389 (1 fiche)

The estimates communicate to Parliament the level and nature of the federal government's spending plans for the coming fiscal year. Part I provides an overview of federal spending. It describes the relationship of the estimates to the expenditure plan (as set out in the budget), summarizes key elements of the main estimates and highlights the major year-over-year changes by department, agency and Crown corporation.

57-mm warhead cookoff simulations using TOPAZ2D

By Grant McIntosh. Courcellette, PQ : Defence Research Establishment Valcartier, 1996. vii, 20 p. : ill., Bibl. (DREV memorandum / Defence Research Establishment Valcartier ; TM-9602) MICROLOG 97-03120 (1 fiche)

A prototype 57-millimetre warhead has been developed which is less likely to react violently to unexpected events such as fires. The warhead contains CX-84A explosive and has been tested experimentally under slow heating conditions to determine time taken for the explosive to react. This report describes a post-experiment simulation of the slow cookoff of the 57-millimetre warhead using the finite element program TOPAZ2D. A simplified model of a fuseless version of the warhead was established and its outer temperature was raised at the same rate as in the experiment. The explosive filling was assumed to react according to one-step, first-order Arrhenius reaction kinetics. Reaction parameters were varied until good agreement was obtained between the simulated and experimental times to reaction. These fitted parameters were then used to model another experiment. The results improve understanding of the results of the warhead cookoff test and enable better characterization of the CX-84A explosive's thermal properties.

En 1994, on a fait de la prospection archéologique et un travail limité de sondage à l'intérieur de la propriété de Parcs Canada où se trouve le lieu historique national du fort-Espérance, afin de localiser les éléments culturels connus et d'en dresser le plan, de sonder certaines zones pour repérer et identifier des vestiges liés au premier fort Espérance qui est censé avoir existé à cet endroit, ainsi que localiser et sonder d'autres éléments, le cas échéant, et déterminer si Parcs Canada possède effectivement les terres qu'il lui faut pour sauvegarder les vestiges du fort Espérance. Ce bulletin de recherche présente les résultats de l'étude.

Cet essai analyse l'ensemble des dispositions liées à l'impôt des particuliers qui apparaissent dans la liste des dépenses fiscales établie par le ministère des Finances. Nous examinons l'importance relative des diverses mesures fiscales en terme de manque à gagner, et nous discutons des problèmes conceptuels liés à ce genre d'analyse. Notre étude démontre que l'impact des dépenses fiscales ne se limite pas à une réduction des recettes gouvernementales. Chaque mesure influence la répartition réelle du fardeau fiscal non seulement entre particuliers de divers niveaux de revenu, mais aussi entre individus qui ont le même revenu. Nous présentons nos propres estimations quant à la répartition, selon le revenu, de plusieurs avantages fiscaux, et nous en analysons les effets sur l'équité du régime.

Acquisition of the active-passive distinction from sparse input and no error feedback

Simon Fraser University. Centre for Systems Science ; CSS-IS TR97-01)
MICROLOG 97-03230 (1 fiche) (Available on fiche only)

Describes a connectionist-inspired, parallel processing network which learns, on the basis of relevant sparse input, to assign meaning interpretations to novel test sentences in both active and passive voice. Training and test sentences are generated from a simple recursive grammar, but once trained, the network is set to process thousands of sentences containing deeply embedded clauses. Training is entirely unsupervised with regard to error feedback, with only Kohonen and Hebbian forms of training employed. The active-passive distinction is acquired without any supervised provision of cues or flags that indicate whether the input sentence is in active or passive mode. The results show the degree of achievement of criteria for syntactic and semantic systematicity.

Adoption homestudy assessment guidelines

Victoria : Ministry for Children & Families, Adoption Division, 1997. 29 p.
MICROLOG 97-03506 (1 fiche)

The guidelines presented in this document are intended to help with the assessment component of the homestudy, an interactive process between prospective adoptive parents and the British Columbia Ministry of Children & Families social worker. They provide the framework for the written homestudy report and are organized into nine topic areas that explore the common themes which previous research and literature suggest provide the best indication of the capacity for adoptive parenthood. Each topic area outlines the objective and rationale of information to be collected, the content of the information to be included in the homestudy report, factors to consider in the assessment, and suggested questions and topics for discussion which are intended to help prospective adoptive parents think about how their strengths and limitations might affect their capacity as adoptive parents.

The purpose of this document is to describe the technological foundations that have been identified for the construction of a generic command and control information system (CCIS) development environment for air force related applications. After an introduction, section 2 provides an analysis of existing systems, either currently in place or under development, in terms of objectives, data domains, possible integration with the Battle Management Information System (BMIS), and geographic information system requirements. Section 3 examines the generic functions and services to be developed within the CCIS foundation environment, including re-development of a subset of BMIS functions under the Windows platform as well as the peripheral software tools that such a system could exploit. Section 4 addresses the problem of data domains to be used in the foundation environment. Section 5 evaluates and recommends the selection of commercially available technological tools to be used for the foundation, including hardware and software components. Selection criteria are established in terms of general requirements established for the CCIS project as well as other requirements identified in other outlying projects.

The ALBEDOS (Airborne Laser-Based Enhanced Detection and Observation System) was designed to overcome deficiencies in existing sensor systems used for search/rescue and short-range surveillance missions. It is based on a powerful laser diode array illuminator and a range-gated low-light level television camera. ALBEDOS can be operated at night and in degraded weather conditions, and since it is a range-gated imaging device, it is immune to the blooming effect specific to highly sensitive cameras and eliminates most of the light backscatter caused by the presence of aerosols between the sensor and the scene. In October 1995, the system was installed on a Bell 412 helicopter and tested in various scenarios. This paper describes the ALBEDOS system and presents results of the field trials conducted over water and over

La collection a été divisée en quatre assemblages, provenant des couches inférieures de l'orifice de nettoyage des latrines dans le mur est de la fosse, du drain de surface en pierre entourant le bâtiment, des latrines des hommes et des latrines des femmes. Dans ces deux derniers endroits, les fouilles ont été superficielles. The magnitude-5 Mont-Laurier earthquake of October 1990 was one of the largest to have occurred in eastern North America during the past decade. High-frequency ground motions recorded on regional network instruments exceeded anticipated values for an event of its size by a factor of 3. A commonly favoured explanation for this discrepancy is that the source was a rare high-stress drop event. This paper examines that hypothesis by deriving detailed fault slip models to fit waveform and spectral characteristics of the network data. The results establish the effective rupture stress, the degree of symmetry of the fault rupture, and average slip time. Taken together with similar results for the November 1988 Saguenay earthquake (magnitude

6.5), the results demonstrate the degree of reliability of the standard Brune complete stress drop model for the interpretation and prediction of strong ground motion.

Anechoic chamber measurements of radiated noise from a ring-stiffened cylinder

By Layton E. Gilroy. Dartmouth, NS : National Defence, Research & Development Branch, Defence Research Establishment Atlantic, 1995. v. 44 p. : ill. (DREA technical memorandum / Defence Research Establishment Atlantic ; 95/231)
MICROLOG 97-03078 (1 fiche)

Describes the measurement of radiated noise from a ring-stiffened steel cylinder subjected to a harmonic load in an anechoic chamber. The measurements were made to provide validation data for structural acoustics computer codes being developed to predict the vibrations and the resulting radiated noise of ship or submarine structures. Natural frequencies and mode shapes of the cylinder were measured using accelerometers placed throughout the cylinder. Directivity patterns of the resulting radiated noise were measured using a microphone at a specified position while the excited cylinder was being rotated, and also with the excited cylinder in a fixed position and the microphone position varied. Over 25 resonant frequencies of the cylinder were identified.

Application of neural computing to sonar contact data management

By Chris Brobeck, Charles Pilkington and Jane Cunningham. Dartmouth, NS : National Defence, Research & Development Branch, Defence Research Establishment Atlantic, 1993. iii, 68 p. : ill., Bibl. (DREA contractor report / Defence Research Establishment Atlantic ; DREA CR/93/479)
MICROLOG 97-03114 (1 fiche)

This report presents a method to assist in the automatic detection and maintenance of passive sonar tracks. The technique employed is based on a neural network strategy known as growing cell structures. The strategy is closely linked to Kohonen's feature map techniques and radial basis function networks. Among other advantages, it demonstrates fast learning, an ability to distribute itself evenly over complex topologies, and the ability to deal with sharp boundaries and discrete regions. The report develops a design for a system to initialize track following mechanisms, then extends this work to track following and loss-of-track scenarios. The effectiveness of the design and implementation is demonstrated with simulated data at several signal to noise ratios. The report also discusses why this method was selected over alternative techniques considered in an interim report (included as an appendix). The report concludes with discussion of possible extensions and improvements to the current work. The appendix also includes a summary of the software used.

The federal Oceans Act authorizes the Government of Canada to establish a national system of marine protected areas (MPAs) and to make appropriate regulations. Such areas could include tidal flats, offshore banks, seamounts, rare-species habitats, deep-sea vents, salt marshes, and spawning or nursery areas. This discussion paper is intended to seek input and comment on the Dept. of Fisheries & Oceans proposed approach to establishing MPAs under the Act. It explains why MPAs are important for Canada, the overall goals and strategies for MPAs, overall purposes for MPAs such as conservation of unique habitats or threatened species, how MPAs will be identified and established, and how MPAs will be managed through partnering with other bodies such as fishing interests, provincial and municipal governments, and Aboriginal organizations.

Presents an assessment of potential exposure and environmental health risks associated with elevated levels of contaminants in soil at Port Hope, Ontario, in the area of the Eldorado Resources facility. A multimedia risk assessment approach that considers total exposure through multiple pathways (including drinking water, food, ambient air, soils/dusts, and consumer products) was utilized to evaluate human exposure to each metal. Different exposure estimates for each pathway were developed for adults and children. To characterize risk, the calculated intakes for adults and children were compared against existing acceptable intakes or oral reference doses. For radionuclides, exposure was assessed through the most significant environmental routes of intake from soil. Separate sections present hazard identification, dose-response information, current exposure limits, the human exposure assessment, and risk characterization for the following: arsenic, antimony, uranium, lead, chromium, copper, nickel, cadmium, cobalt, selenium, zinc, and the radionuclides radium-226, lead-210, and uranium-238.

This paper traces developments in Ontario auto insurance over the last 20 years. It begins with a review of automobile insurance before Bill 68, when accident compensation was based on the fault (or tort) system. This system was modified in 1980 with the introduction of compulsory auto insurance and the requirement for insurance companies to provide add-on no-fault benefits. Five major studies of auto insurance in the province conducted before Bill 68 are also reviewed. This is followed by a review of Bill 68 (1989), which established a new threshold auto insurance system; the rationale for its introduction; reactions to the bill from the industry and affected parties; and the effects of the bill. Finally, the paper discusses Bill 164, introduced in 1991, which proposes to enhance the no-fault benefits established under Bill 68, eliminate the right to sue for economic loss, and restore the right to sue for non-economic loss. Reaction to the bill is summarized, and the paper concludes with discussion of the advantages and drawbacks of no-fault insurance, public versus private administration of insurance plans, and whether non-economic loss should be compensated.

It then reviews the proposed reassessment plan for Metropolitan Toronto and key issues associated with Bill 94, the Metropolitan Toronto Reassessment Statute Law Amendment Act. The effects of an interim reassessment plan on the property taxes in various regions of Metro Toronto are noted and highlights of legislative debate and committee hearings in to Bill 94 are presented. Issues raised include the effect of tax increases on retail businesses and individual properties in older neighbourhoods, the wisdom of using 1988 market values as a base for reassessment, and the impact of tax adjustments in the midst of a recession. Finally, possible future proposals for revising the reassessment plan are discussed.

The 1995 report of the Chief Actuary on the Canada Pension Plan (CPP) predicted that contribution rates would have to rise to 14.2% over the next 30 years to meet benefit commitments. Federal and provincial governments are now considering ways to address this concern. Debate about closure of the funding gap is tied to notions of intergenerational equity, or whether older age groups living now should have to pay relatively more in net contributions so that younger and future age groups will not have to face proportionately higher payments themselves. This paper attempts to highlight the consequences of refinancing the CPP on different age groups over their lifetimes, and suggests what federal and provincial government actions would be appropriate. Comparison of expected lifetime contributions with lifetime benefits across generations clarifies the intergenerational equity implications of attempting to sustain the CPP.

Although the German Bundesbank has many responsibilities that are common features of central banks, its high degree of independence and power make it an unusual or potentially futuristic form of central bank when viewed from the Canadian context. The bank has been envisioned as a model for a new European central bank and provides a provocative source of ideas for restructuring the Bank of Canada. This paper begins with a commentary on the challenges facing modern central banking and the criticism that these institutions face in difficult economic times. It then examines the origins, historical development, and operations of the Bundesbank. Additional sections assess its strengths and weaknesses and highlight the complex relationship between the Bundesbank and the German federal government. MICROLOG 97-03197 (1 fiche)

Presents a survey of air quality in the vicinity of Breslube Enterprises, a waste oil refinery in Breslau, Ontario. The results are compared to those of a 1984 survey to determine whether the installation of a new vacuum distillation system at the refinery had improved the air quality in the area. Details are included on the monitoring instrumentation and chromatographic analysis results. Parameters measured include volatile organic compounds, nitrogen oxides, and sulphur dioxide.

Building a strategy for dealing with violence in the N.W.T.

Yellowknife : Dept. of Justice, 1993. 27 p.
MICROLOG 97-03205 (1 fiche)

The purpose of this document is to generate discussion and to further a process that will lead to a reduction in the level of violence in the Northwest Territories, which has a violent crime rate six times the national average. The document begins with an examination of the significance of violence as a problem in society and some of the underlying causes of violent behaviour. It then addresses elements that must be brought to bear in an effort to reduce violence and its devastating effects. These include the role of the mass media and the justice system, an investment in youth to break the cycle of family violence, community healing, treatment of offenders, services to victims, community-based justice, and interagency co-operation. The document ends with a discussion of the goal of zero tolerance for family violence.

Each chapter provides an in-depth discussion of one of the ten principles involved, along with practical advice on its application. It outlines typical problems that could arise in applying the principle and gives examples of how those problems could be addressed. The chapters cover: choosing consensus processes versus alternatives; making consensus processes inclusive; voluntary participation; designing consensus processes; keeping the processes flexible; providing equal opportunity for all parties; respecting and understanding diverse interests; achieving accountability; setting time limits; and implementing consensus agreements. Appendices include case studies of Canadian consensus processes and a description of the tasks of a complex public dispute mediator.

Monitoring changes in stream sedimentation resulting from forest land use is commonly conducted by intensive sampling of both suspended sediments and the incidence of fines within natural gravel substrates. A simple alternative indicator of both parameters is the measurement of the deposition of fines in containers of a standardized mixture of gravel free of fines. This report presents results of a study conducted to determine the utility of sediment deposition traps as a simple indicator of sedimentation of fish habitat. Investigators installed replicate sets of these traps in coastal stream sites in British Columbia which provided a range of suspended sediment loadings. They removed the traps from the six study sites after about 20, 40, and 60 days and analyzed the contents to determine sediment deposition over the deployment period. Depth, current velocity, and turbidity were also measured regularly at each site and water samples were taken to obtain an average suspended sediment concentration. Relationships between suspended load and deposition were determined by plotting sediment accumulation in the traps against suspended sediment (concentration and dose).

The Canadian Forest Fire Behavior Predictor (FBP) System provides a systematic method of assessing fire behaviour. The FBP System has 14 primary inputs that can be divided into five general categories: fuels, weather, topography, foliar moisture content, and type and duration of prediction. In the FBP System, these inputs are used to mathematically develop four primary and 11 secondary outputs. Primary outputs are generally based on a fire intensity equation, and secondary outputs are calculated using a simple elliptical fire growth model. This publication provides diagrams, examples, and exercises that explain the FBP System in a user-oriented manner. It delineates the interpretation of the system's inputs and outputs and details how the predictions are derived.

The Charter of Rights and the redistribution of electoral districts

By Philip Kaye. Toronto : Ontario Legislative Library, Legislative Research Service, 1993. 16 p. : Bibl. (Current issue paper / Ontario. Legislative Library ; no. 141 ISSN 0835-0299)
MICROLOG 97-03182 (1 fiche)

This paper examines the implications of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms for the drawing of provincial electoral boundaries. The Supreme Court has ruled that drawing of such boundaries is subject to one of the democratic rights guaranteed under the Charter (in Section 3): the right to vote. Background to the Supreme Court decision is reviewed and its application to electoral redistribution discussed. Issues examined include the representation of rural versus urban voters, the criteria used to determine the population of electoral ridings, and principles underlying electoral redistribution. A brief review is also presented of cases involving the constitutionality of provincial electoral boundary decisions in British Columbia and Alberta. Finally, the paper discusses whether electoral redistributions might violate other sections of the Charter, as well as possible future court challenges to redistributions.

Presents a strategy for managing and conserving the co-existence of Inuit and beluga in the southeast Baffin region, which encompasses the communities of Pangnirtung, Iqaluit, and Lake Harbour, along with associated waters frequented by beluga in the hunting season. The objectives of the strategy include establishment of a system of beluga hunting rights, priorities, privileges, and obligations, and of a beluga management system that is governed by conservation principles, reflects the primary role of Inuit in beluga hunting, and promotes long-term Inuit interests. Background is included on historical perspectives regarding beluga management controversies, the importance of beluga to Inuit, the differences in Inuit and European knowledge and attitudes toward beluga management, and available information on south-east Baffin beluga. Strategies are discussed for acquiring information for beluga co-management, managing and monitoring the beluga hunt, management roles and responsibilities, beluga habitat protection, education, training, and public awareness.

Columbia Power is seeking approval to construct and operate a 2209-megawatt power plant at the Hugh Keenleyside Dam on the Columbia River, about 7 kilometres upstream from Castlegar, British Columbia. The power plant project involves installation of three generating units, transmission line, approach and tailrace channels, and construction facilities. The requirements contained in this document identify the outstanding issues that needed to be addressed by Columbia Power before a recommendation on the project could be made to provincial and federal environment authorities. The document includes a review of the environmental assessment process and a presentation and discussion of the requirements for both the power plant and the transmission line. The requirements address such issues as project design, environmental effects, socio-economic and cultural heritage effects, project justification, and water licence issues.

Appendices include public responses on the project report requirements and on the power plant project.

The purpose of this study is to develop economic measures for two wildlife resources in Newfoundland. The contingent valuation method was used to value the existence of the Newfoundland pine marten, a threatened species, and moose hunting in the province. Data for the study were collected through personal interviews, and mail-out household and moose hunter surveys. In examining the two wildlife resources, the measurement of a use value (recreational activity and food value) is compared to that of a non-use (existence) value. The study offers insights into benefit estimation and the differences in estimation between use and non-use values.

Element patterns were obtained with an airborne antenna pattern measurement system using a differential geographical positioning system. Separate ground conductivity measurements provided appropriate ground parameters for the modelling, performed using NEC2 software. Explanations are offered for the differences between observed and modelled results, and recommendations are made regarding antenna pattern measurements.

This paper examines the Constituency Assembly on the Municipal Government System in Hamilton-Wentworth (CAHW) to assess its appropriateness as a model for citizen participation. It begins by placing the CAHW in the context of regional government reform in the Hamilton-Wentworth area, then examines the CAHW's structure and operation, including its mandate, method of consultation, and recommendations produced. The ensuing debate over municipal reform, which culminated in the province's decision to create a single-tier municipal system, is outlined next. The paper concludes by drawing some lessons from the CAHW experience for using constituent assemblies in other local decision making processes.

The simulations indicate the dependences of the depth of descent and properties of the discharge plume on the discharge configuration and oceanographic conditions.

Cette étude, qui s'inspire de diverses recherches effectuées sur la dynamique des prix au Canada, examine certaines hypothèses susceptibles d'expliquer la piètre qualité des prévisions réalisées récemment à l'aide de la courbe de Phillips traditionnelle. Parmi les explications du problème de sous-estimation de l'inflation que nous considérons, l'hypothèse que le processus de formation des attentes d'inflation a changé au cours des dernières années est celle qui ressort le plus de nos conclusions. Les modifications des attentes ont, selon tout vraisemblance, été influencées par l'évolution de la politique monétaire. Pour tenir compte de cet élément, nous estimons la courbe de Phillips en y incluant quatre régimes autorégressifs déterminés à partir des résultats d'un modèle de Markov à changement de régime. La courbe de Phillips dotée de changements de régime permet de réaliser depuis 1991 des prévisions précises de l'inflation.

Les champignons sont des végétaux saprophytes dépourvus de chlorophylle. Contrairement aux végétaux chlorophylliens, ils sont incapables de fabriquer les substances nécessaires à leur nutrition et dépendent entièrement à cet égard des matières organiques. Le principal champignon cultivé au Canada est le champignon de couche ou champignon de Paris. Il représente environ 99 % de toute la production. Ce document porte sur la culture du champignon de couche. Les points qui y sont abordés sont les suivants : techniques de culture commerciale; conception des champignonnières; les ennemis du champignon de couche; et, la myciculture et le respect du milieu naturel.

The Ontario Red Tape Review Commission was given a one-year mandate to: work with ministries and Cabinet to remove red tape barriers to job creation, better government, and economic growth, and develop ways of changing the province's regulatory structure to prevent more red tape from being created in the future. This report summarizes the rationale for the Commission and the procedures used in the review. It then presents recommendations addressing systemic or government-wide regulatory problems, such as eliminating duplication and overlap with the federal government as well as within Ontario's own regulatory system, the need to change the attitude of provincial employees who implement regulatory requirements, and putting consistent policies in place regarding the use of regulatory measures. Finally, specific priority recommendations are made for eight ministries. The appendix contains a summary of government accomplishments in regulatory reform, arranged by ministry.

Describes the frequency down conversion unit designed, assembled, and tested as part of a project related to satellite communications in the extremely high frequency band. The down converter unit is responsible for receiving a 43.5-45.5 gigahertz frequency-hopped signal and to convert it to a 20-megahertz dehopped signal. The unit has a gain of 80 decibels, a noise figure of 11.7 decibels, and a 1-decibel compression point. The output power level is maintained within 1.5 decibels for any signal falling in the input frequency band.

Data managers in the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development are accountable for the quality of the data they collect. To meet this obligation, a great deal of care is taken in the data collection process to ensure that quality data are entered on their databases. Notwithstanding this important work, answers are needed to two basic questions about our data holdings : (1) What is the level of quality; and (2) What level of quality is adequate? With no solid answer to these questions, data quality is a nagging issue, particularly because the department is so dependent on data. This document presents a data quality review of the 1995-1996 nominal roll.

The Northwest Territories Arts Council funds the production of demonstration recordings by territorial artists. This report presents results of a survey conducted to evaluate the effectiveness of this support. Responses were solicited from those who had received support for recording projects during 1989-93 and from people involved in the music or performing arts industries in the Northwest Territories. The survey addressed three basic questions: whether the demo recording support was worthwhile and what were its results; whether the support is sufficient and provided in the right areas; and whether the manner of delivery of the support is clear, timely, and helpful. Presents technical details on the development and optimization of a microplate gene probe assay for Newcastle disease virus. The assay was developed to take advantage of enhancements in automation and machine-readable quantitation over membrane-based assay formats. A 673 base pair double-stranded DNA fragment of the major nucleocapsid protein gene of the virus was labelled with a non-radioactive molecule (digoxigenin) and used as a probe against denatured, unlabelled DNA bound to 96-well, polystyrene microtiter plates. The probe/target complex was detected with an anti-digoxigenin antibody conjugated to horseradish peroxidase, followed by colorimetric detection. The performance of the microplate assay is compared to that of a membrane-based gene probe assay developed for the same probe/target.

Advantages of the microplate assay for field applications are also discussed.

Recognizing the need for consistent information concerning the success of nursing program graduates in finding employment, the Dept. of Advanced Education and Labour consulted with the educational institutions, as well as other parties, to conduct a survey of graduates of the institutions which offer nursing education in the province. Eligible for this survey were all students who graduated in the previous year. Graduates were asked about their labour market activities during a reference week. This report is presented in two parts. The first section presents aggregated results for all programs, diploma schools and university programs. Information is presented for key indicators such as employment rate, employment in New Brunswick, related employment, employment status, hours of work, etc. The second section presents information on labour force participation and employment at the program level. Describes a study undertaken to determine species composition, relative number, seasonality, and growth of age 0+ fishes in several different biotope types in the inner sector of Long Point Bay, Lake Erie. The study area is characteristically shallow, protected, densely vegetated, and utilized intensively by humans for fishing and recreation. Fish larvae were collected at the shore with seine and nets. The age 0+ taxocene consisted of 12 families and 27 species in eight reproductive guilds, dominated by centrarchids and cyprinids. The most common and abundant taxa included Lepomis gibbosus, Labidesthes sicculus, Perca flavescens, and Notemigonus crysoleucas. Small numbers of a vulnerable species, lake chubsucker (Erimyzon sucetta) were also collected, and description and illustrations of this species are included as an aid in identification.

Presents a synthesis on the ecology, status, and conservation of marine and shoreline birds of the Queen Charlotte Islands, compiling papers on various disciplines to provide a review of what is currently known about the islands' marine biology, with a particular emphasis on birds. The papers are presented in five sections: the physical and biological environment and prey organisms, including physical oceanography, zooplankton distribution and availability, and marine fishes as prey; nesting populations of marine birds and distribution of birds at sea; distribution and association of marine waterfowl, including papers on the distribution and ecology of Branta bernicla; seasonality and nesting of shorebirds; and introduced predators and toxic chemicals.

Prepared for Saskatchewan Gaming Corporation ; submitted by Angelo Carleri. Regina : Tourism Saskatchewan, Research & Analysis, 1997. 28 p.
MICROLOG 97-03270 (1 fiche)

Presents a study to measure the operational and tourism impacts of the casino in Regina on the local and provincial economies. Impact estimates are based on the operation expenses of Casino Regina and the expenditures of visitors who come to Regina because of the casino. Economic impacts were measured using the Regina Input-Output Model and the Saskatchewan Input-Output Model. These models estimate gross output, gross domestic product at factor cost and market prices, employment, and labour income. Information on the models is included in the appendix.

Effect of fibre type on heat loss through fabrics

By Rita M. Crow. North York, ON : National Defence, Defence & Civil Institute of Environmental Medicine, 1996. iv, 10 p. : ill. (DCIEM technical memorandum / Defence & Civil Institute of Environmental Medicine (Canada) ; no. 96-TM-17)
MICROLOG 97-03109 (1 fiche)

Describes measurements of heat flow through thin cotton and polyester woven fabrics of similar physical properties, plus three types of knitted underwear. The measurements were made on a guarded hot plate to determine the influence of fibre type on heat loss. Two conditions were selected, one where the fabric was wetted and allowed to dry to simulate the case where the sweat had totally wicked from the skin into the overlying clothing, and one where a warm surface was wetted to simulate sweating skin and a dry fabric placed on top of it. Conditions in which heat was lost from the skin are identified, as well as the factors affecting the relationship between the time for a wet fabric to dry and the amount of energy required to do so.

An ultra large scale integration computer architecture has been proposed which is defect tolerant and which uses a better balance between processing cell complexity and integration level than the current very large scale integration chips. The architecture proposed is a massively parallel multiple instruction multiple data structure, comprising a general purpose communication network. The complete network is a hierarchy of buses, each configured as a token ring local area network. Processing cells in the network are composed of a processor, some local memory, and a router. This document describes the basic routers from different perspectives and at different levels of abstraction. It includes an overview of the architecture and router operation, a description of the operating modes and the state diagram of the router, a block diagram of the complete router, and the router test method. The appendix provides a comprehensive list of signal definitions, state machine transition definitions, and cell descriptions.

Pyridinium and bis-pyridinium oxime salts are currently in use or under development for treatment of patients exposed to organophosphorus nerve agents. This paper examines the use of electrospray mass spectrometry, a relatively new ionization approach, as a possible technique for the identification of these oximes and their degradation products. Six therapeutic oxime salts were analyzed using the technique, making use of the collisionally activated dissociation (CAD) opportunities offered by the electrospray interface. The CAD/mass spectra of each oxime were acquired under two different sampling cone voltage settings and the quadrupole mass analyzer associated with a hybrid tandem mass spectrometer was used for applications including the reliable differentiation of similar bis-pyridinium oximes and the identification of a decomposition product.

Employability skills for British Columbia -- Updated

Victoria : Ministry of Education, Skills & Training, 1996. 138 p.
MICROLOG 97-03246 (2 fiche)

Describes and presents findings of a project that explored the skills and personal qualities sought in new recruits to positions with British Columbia employers. The purpose of the project was to gain insight into the broad-based employability skills required by small- and medium-sized organizations in the province. The study methodology involved discussion groups with 195 recruiters selected from organizations employing up to 100 people and representing all economic sectors and regions. Participants were requested to freely identify as many or as few skills they would require in new recruits, to select the 15 most important personal management skills and qualities from a given list of 42, and to identify any other relevant skills or qualities not included. Findings presented include differences among sectors of employment and the kinds of skills most sought by employers. The findings are relevant to the education and training that purports to prepare individuals for employment.

In March 1991, the Ontario government directed the Management Board Secretariat to undertake bilateral consultation on the possible reform of the Crown Employees Collective Bargaining Act with the parties governed by the Act. The Board has undertaken consultation with stakeholders to identify their interests, concerns about reform of the Act, and areas of consensus on the direction of reform. This report synthesizes the views of the various parties and the research undertaken, and provides recommendations for possible reform of the Act from the perspective of the government as an employer. Issues reviewed include the right to strike, essential service designation, description of bargaining units, the bargaining process, management rights, negotiable issues, successor rights, Crown employee status, and arbitration.

The evaluation presented in this report is one part of the post-project environmental review undertaken by Manitoba Hydro and the Split Lake Cree. It focuses on about 12 million acres in the Split Lake area, where 35 hydroelectric projects constructed since the 1950s have had some impact. The main objective of the evaluation is to assess the extent of knowledge of the existing environment in the area, which embodies impacts of existing development. It includes an evaluation of the adequacy of current baseline information to underpin assessments of ongoing and future changes that have the potential to result from existing and future hydroelectric projects. Baseline information for future development is also reviewed. These types of information relate to such matters as fish and wildlife, plants, resource harvesting, subsistence food supply, heritage resources, navigation, and health. ### Évaluation de la politique pilote de télétravail : points saillants

Ottawa : Conseil du trésor du Canada, Secrétariat, Groupe de l'évaluation, de la vérification et de l'examen, 1996. x, 21, x, 19 p. (Vers une meilleure gestion / Canada. Conseil du trésor; no 8) Bilingue (Evaluation of telework pilot policy...)

L'objectif général de cette évaluation est de déterminer si la politique pilote de télétravail fournit aux employés une solution viable visant à établir un meilleur équilibre entre leur vie professionnelle et leur vie personnelle sans pour autant que l'employeur ne subisse quelque perte que ce soit tant du point de vue économique qu'opérationnel. Un deuxième objectif visait à déterminer s'il y a lieu de maintenir la politique de l'agence centrale en matière de télétravail. Ce document présente les points saillants de la situation et examine les points sulvants : portrait des télétravailleurs; répercussions du télétravail; et, conclusions et recommandations.

Cette politique, qui régit la prestation de services aux fonctionnaires fédéraux ayant une déficience est entrée en vigueur en 1989. L'évaluation comportait comme principales activités : l'examen des dossiers et de la documentation; les entrevues; l'analyse et la synthèse de l'information et des données; la rédaction de l'ébauche du rapport final et une séance de travail avec les coordonnateurs de l'équité en emploi; et, la rédaction du rapport final; la gestion du projet. On a également examiné un certain nombre de dossiers et d'autres documents ministériels et déterminé leur pertinence aux fins de l'évaluation. Consistent with recent federal guidelines to better define new initiatives at an early stage, particularly in terms of measurable objectives, indicators of performance, and requirements for information collection to measure performance, and requirements for information collection to measure performance, the Treasury Board Secretariat commissioned the development of an evaluation framework for Early Departure Incentive (EDI) and Early Retirement Incentive (ERI). The framework is intended to support operational and corporate management as well as provide the groundwork for an effective and efficient future evaluation of the initiatives. The evaluation framework for EDI and ERI is described in this report. It has been developed in accordance with current best practices for evaluation, consistent with Treasury Board policies and practices.

Describes an evaluation of a sandwich gene probe assay in comparison to a direct gene probe assay, in which the target sequence was a 673 base pair DNA fragment of the major nucleocapsid protein gene of the Newcastle disease virus. In the direct probe assay, the fragment was labelled with digoxigenin and hybridized to unlabelled target DNA. In the sandwich assay, the target DNA was detected using two probes: a primary probe, an unlabelled recombinant M13mp18 viral DNA containing the gene fragment which hybridized to the target DNA, and a secondary probe, digoxigenin-labelled DNA which hybridized to the M13 sequences within the primary probe. The detection limits resulting from the sandwich assay are compared to those demonstrated for the direct assay.

At the Fundy National Park golf course, fungicides containing mercury were applied to greens between 1949 and 1983, and mercury contamination still persists on the course. This report summarizes three 1995 studies to provide an assessment of that contamination. An Environment Canada study documented potential environmental contamination from the use of mercury-based fungicides on golf course greens in Atlantic Canada. Another study by GEMTEC provided a more detailed valuation of the magnitude and distribution of mercury contamination at the Fundy National Park course by analyzing samples of soil, water, grass, and sediment. The third study involved a human health risk assessment using data from the GEMTEC study and results from air samples collected on a hot summer day. Methodology employed included hazard identification, toxicity assessment, and risk characterization.

Evaluation of standards for traffic signs and their application to bilingual signing

A. Smiley... et al. Downsview, ON : Ministry of Transportation, Research & Development Branch, 1996. vi, 51 p. : Ill., Bibl.

MICROLOG 97-03304 (1 fiche)

Describes a study undertaken to apply the French Language Services Act to English signing on 161 kilometres of Ontario freeways. The research provided an opportunity to redesign existing signing, not only for French-speaking drivers but for all drivers, particularly other non-English-speaking drivers and older drivers. The study involved development of alternative freeway sign designs based on practices elsewhere, a literature review, and advice from other traffic safety researchers. Objectives in creating those alternatives included enhancement of driver comprehension and bilingualization or symbolization of exit messages. In a comprehension study, subjects were stratified according to age, first language, and familiarity with the freeways. For glance-legibility testing, drivers from three language groups were recruited. Designs recommended by the study derive from optimizing the results of the comprehension and glance-legibility testing together with the consistency requirements.

Reports results of tests evaluating a surface supplied gas panel that was modified to support three divers in the open circuit diving mode, as well as two divers using surface supplied CUMA (Canadian Underwater Mine Countermeasures Apparatus). The evaluation was undertaken to determine whether a single panel could be used to safely meet the needs of both open- and closed-circuit light-weight breathing gas supply systems. Results are given for a design review of the panel and unmanned functional trials. Fundamental design flaws are identified and panel ergonomics are discussed.

This evaluation tries to determine if the policy has provided employees a viable option for a better balance between work life and personal life, without incurring any economic or operational loss for the employer. A secondary objective was to determine if there is a continuing need to maintain a central agency policy on telework. The evaluation inquired into the following areas: departmental implementation of the policy and guidelines; the profile of teleworkers and their telework practices; the cost of equipment and material used; the impacts of telework on teleworkers; the impacts for the employer; impacts on productivity; the extent of non-documented telework; the incidence of employees denied the opportunity to telework; and, health and safety-related aspects of telework.

In view of the important role of the grower/finisher feeder in controlling pork production costs, a research project was conducted to evaluate 12 different models of feeders representing four major types currently on the market. This report describes that project and presents the results. It begins with descriptions of the 12 feeders tested and of the pig behaviour patterns observed at the feeders. Results are presented in terms of production performance and carcass quality of pigs using the feeders; feed wastage of the feeders; eating speed of pigs at each of the tested feeders; the preference of pigs within a feeder type and among feeder types; feeder ergonomics; the effects of feed form (wet or dry) on feeder performance; effects of space allowance (single versus multiple) on feeder performance; differences in performance between lever-operated and non-lever-operated feeders; and individual differences among feeder models.

Pour s'acquitter de cette obligation, beaucoup d'attention est apportée au processus de collecte des données, de façon à s'assurer que les bases de données reposent sur une information de qualité. Malgré cet effort important, nous devons répondre à deux questions essentielles au sujet de nos banques de données : (1) Quel est le niveau de qualité des données?; et (2) Quel niveau de qualité est adéquat? En l'absence d'une réponse claire à ces questions, le problème de la qualité des données demeure entier, notamment en raison du rôle crucial que jouent les données dans les activités du ministère. Ce document se penche sur la question et présente un examen de la qualité des données de l'état nominatif 1995-1996.

An Example of obtaining detailed stresses of a portion of a MAESTRO model of a ship structure by bottom-up and top-down analysis using MAESTRO MG/DSA

Describes the method and results of detailed analyses of a portion of a ship structure modelled by the MAESTRO program. A bottom-up analysis was carried out to identify high stress regions, which were then modelled in detail using the program MAESTRO MG/DSA. The detail was created as a MAESTRO superelement, which was automatically statically condensed and inserted into the original MAESTRO model equilibrium equations replacing the identified MAESTRO elements. A MAESTRO analysis of the modified model, using the same loading and boundary conditions as the original model, was run and detailed displacements and stresses were obtained using the superelement feature of the finite element program VAST. For the top-down analysis, the detail model created for the superelement was used as a stand-alone model. The displacements from the initial MAESTRO analysis were applied to the stand-alone model as boundary conditions and a VAST finite element analysis was carried out. The results of the three analyses are compared, showing which model provided the better definition of the local stress condition.

A new kind of detonator, the exploding foil initiator (EFI), directly initiates secondary explosives and consequently requires no physical barrier or misalignment of explosive components to prevent inadvertent detonation. In the EFI, physical barriers are replaced with electronic barriers (semiconductor switches). The EFI system described in this report comprises a capacitor discharge circuit (CDC) constructed from a 0.1-microfarad capacitor that could be charged to 3.5 kilovolts. This CDC is used to explode 0.25-millimetre-wide copper foils that accelerate 0.025-millimetre-thick polyimide flyer plates to sufficient velocity to promptly detonate pressed pellets of fine-grained hexanitrostilbene explosive powder. The report compares the experimental performance of the EFI system with the predicted performance of modelling equations implemented in computer software. A statistical procedure was employed to estimate the 50% detonation voltage of the initiator.

The extra-strength sewage surcharge (ESSS) is levied against industrial users of sanitary sewers. The charge increases as waste strength increases beyond a designated threshold, and provide an economic incentive to dischargers to reduce waste strength. This report presents a detailed investigation of ESSS programs in Canada. A literature review, a national survey of municipal sewage authorities, and subsequent interviews and data analyses were completed to fulfil the following objectives: to document the existence and application of ESSS in Canada; to evaluate the effectiveness of these surcharges; and to provide input to Ontario municipal sewer use control strategies. As most existing programs focus on larger high-strength waste dischargers and are concerned with the discharge of biological or chemical oxygen demand, solids, grease, and oil, the study findings relate primarily to these conventional wastewater parameters. Advantages and disadvantages of ESSS programs are also discussed.

Fads or bubbles?

By Huntley Schaller and Simon Van Norden. Ottawa : Bank of Canada, 1997. 47 p. : Bibl. (Working paper / Bank of Canada ; 97-2 ISSN 1192-5434) ISBN 0-662-25316-7 MICROLOG 97-03402 (1 fiche)

There has been considerable academic interest in models of the stock market in which price deviates from fundamental price. Two of the main alternative models are the fads model proposed by Summers (1986) and the stochastic bubbles model proposed by Blanchard and Watson (1982). This paper proposes an empirical strategy for distinguishing between fads and bubbles. The Blanchard/Watson model is extended to show how stochastic bubbles can lead to regime switching in stock market returns. Incorporation of state-dependent heteroskedasticity into the fads model is used to show whether that model can also lead to regime switching. The estimation of the two models is discussed, showing how they imply different parameter restrictions on a general switching regression. The final sections discuss techniques for measuring apparent deviations from fundamental price and present empirical results for the fads and bubbles models.

Les fenêtres sont la source de déperdition thermique la plus importante de l'enveloppe d'un bâtiment. Elles présentent des inconvénients du point de vue du rendement énergétique, du confort, de l'entretien et de la longévité. La série Transfert de technologie sur l'optimisation de l'énergie vise à informer les administrateurs d'immeubles, les ingénieurs-concepteurs, les directeurs et chefs de projets, de même que nos clients, des possibilités qu'offrent les nouvelles technologies pour réduire la consommation et les frais d'énergie. Cette note sur les fenêtres à bon rendement énergétique a pour but de faire connaître les différentes applications de cette technologie et les procédés de mise en œuvre.

Describes an ecological classification system developed for the ecoregions of northern Alberta through analysis of vegetation, soil, site, and forest productivity information. The classification system has three hierarchical levels: ecosite, ecosite phase, and plant community type. Thirty-eight ecosites are described, with further detail provided by subdivision into ecosite phase and plant community type. A soil type classification system that describes 17 soil types is also developed. Forest management interpretations are made for drought, excess moisture, soil rutting hazard, compaction hazard, puddling hazard, soil erosion hazard frost heave hazard, soil temperature limitations, vegetation competition, and windthrow hazard. Includes photos and drawings of 87 common plants of northern Alberta ecoregions and a glossary.

In September 1996, as part of a significant restructuring of the British Columbia government to better serve the needs of children and families, the Ministry for Children & Families and the office of Children's Commissioner were created. This report provides an update on the mandate of the Children's Commission and how that mandate has been put into practice, with data on the previous year's work of the Child & Family Review Board and the child fatality reviews completed up to the end of 1996. It then sets out recommendations arising from a review of those fatalities, grouped into three categories: key policy and practice issues that concern all child and family serving agencies in the province; key recommendations to specific sectors such as the medical and educational communities; and key recommendations based on the cause of death or factors in a child's death.

The document describes what fish habitat is, why it is protected, and how it is protected through legislation, policies, standards, and guidelines. The following development activities are covered by the guidelines: site preparation and servicing, including vegetation and topsoil removal, site grading, and installation of utilities and roads; stormwater management; groundwater extraction; dredging and filling of water bodies; shoreline alterations such as dock construction and erosion protection works; and water crossings, diversions, ponds, and channelizations. Finally, the information requirements that a proponent must supply to a reviewing agency to address fish habitat concerns are reviewed.

Describes a new provisional classification of forest humus forms within forests of the boreal and Great Lakes-Saint Lawrence forest regions of north-western Ontario. Four major orders are recognized: mulls, moders, mors, and peatmors. Humus form groups are defined and described, and methodologies and approaches for humus form recognition in the field are briefly discussed. The first-approximation classification system permits identification of 11 forest humus form subgroups in north-western Ontario. The hierarchical system consists of a field key and a set of one-page summaries that describe each of the humus form subgroups. Common organic layer thickness ranges, the relative occurrence and distribution of the forest humus forms, and other data are summarized in relation to north-western Ontario's Forest Ecosystem Classification plot network. Forest humus forms are related to soil/site conditions, vegetation, general climate, and forest management practices in the region are also considered.

The agreements cover a specific section of Crown land and replace existing licensing arrangements with an Agreement which requires the companies to manage the forests on a sustained-yield basis, including responsibility for harvesting, planning, regeneration and other silvicultural activities necessary for proper forest man-

The Formal private sector in Bangkok, Thailand : providing a low-income housing alternative?

By Karis Hiebert. Vancouver, BC : University of British Columbia, Centre for Human Settlements ; School of Community & Regional Planning, 1997. ii, 52 p. : Bibl. (AURN WP / Asian Urban Research Network ; #14 ISSN 1190-8971) At head of title: Asian Urban Research Network.

This paper reports on what kinds of people in Bangkok seem to have benefited directly from developer-built, low-cost housing in recent years, based on data from recent household surveys about the cheapest formal developer-built housing product: low-cost condominiums (LCCs). The findings are examined in relation to the claims that have been made about the role of LCCs in addressing the shelter needs of low income people. The first section of the paper surveys issues in the housing policy debate about enabling the formal sector's provision of low-income housing to the poor. Section 2 describes the housing policy context and institutions in Thailand and the claims that have been made about the success of the Thai approach to supportive housing policy. Section 3 examines what groups appear to be buying and occupying LCC units, and reflects on the constraints and opportunities of a strategy to encourage the formal private sector to develop low-cost housing. The final section presents ideas for further research to better understand the housing needs of lower income households and the role and function of formal private sector housing in meeting those needs. The method is based on the three-dimensional (3-D) zero-speed Green function in the frequency domain. The 3-D panel method is used in the numerical implementation. Improvement over the 3-D frequency domain program SMCA3 was achieved by including the steady flow effect on the unsteady wave field around the ship hull and by applying analytical formulas and Gaussian quadrature to the integration of the Green function over a flat panel. The new, improved program is called SMCA4. Computed results for three ships are presented and comparisons are made with model test data.

This document has been written for dry cleaning companies, and is aimed at sensitizing them to the environmental problems resulting from the use of cleaning equipment that is not capable of adequate perchloroethylene recovery and identifying coming changes related to the use of this solvent. The use of water-based cleaning as an alternative to dry cleaning is then described. The results of a demonstration project on wet cleaning technology conducted in Ontario are also discussed, including the specific characteristics of wet cleaning and the market share it could capture. The hybridized product was separated by biotin-streptavidin mediated filtration capture and detected using a light-addressable potentiometric sensor (LAPS) which monitored the presence of urease conjugated (anti-fluorescein) antibodies incorporated in the hybridized product. Results presented include total assay time and lower detection limit. The results indicate the usefulness of the LAPS assay technique compared to conventional membrane-based colorimetric assays.

Since the early 1970s, generic advertising (conducted co-operatively by all firms in an industry) has assumed a larger place in the marketing strategies of most primary producer groups in Canada. This paper summarizes theoretical work on the general effects of advertising and the results of empirical applications to generic advertising for Canadian agricultural commodities. It characterizes results of generic advertising for pork, beef, eggs, poultry, milk, butter, and cheese, and describes the range of advertising elasticities (percentage change in quantity demanded in response to a one percent change in generic advertising expenditure) found for each commodity. The material presented indicates the effectiveness of generic advertising in generating producer profits above advertising costs.

Geochemistry of marine sediments from the Strait of Georgia, British Columbia

By Colin E. Dunn, R.G. Balma and W.A. Spirito. Ottawa : Natural Resources Canada, Geological Survey of Canada, 1996. 193 p. : ill., Maps, Bibl. (Open file / Geological Survey of Canada ; 3052)
MICROLOG 97-03627 (3 fiche)

The bulk of this report consists of data tables and maps of the geochemistry of marine sediments in the Strait of Georgia in the vicinity of Vancouver and of a few fluvial deposits from the Fraser River. The first section of the report describes the sample collection, preparation, and analytical methodology and highlights some of the element associations found in the study area. The maps show dots proportional to the relative concentration of each element.

The Geographic distribution of Canada's bilateral assistance : alternative approach

By Nicolas Dimic. Ottawa : Dept. of Foreign Affairs & International Trade, 1995. 42 p. (Policy staff paper / Canada. Dept. of Foreign Affairs & International Trade ; SP69A) (Economic papers / Canada. Dept. of Foreign Affairs & International Trade ; 95/11)
MICROLOG 97-03688 (1 fiche)

This paper develops indicators to test alternative approaches to the allocation of Canada's bilateral assistance to developing countries. The 25 indicators are arranged in five clusters: commitment to people, commitment to sound economic policies, commitment to the environment, commitment to democratic development/human rights/stable security, and Canadian interests and values. The first four measure the commitment of governments to sustainable development on the basis that bilateral assistance will be most effective in countries whose own governments are most committed to pursuing appropriate policies. The 20 highest scoring developing countries are listed. The paper then tests two other approaches, one considering only the world's least developed countries, and the other placing greater emphasis on a more complete cross-section of Canadian interests using the fifth cluster. The results of the different approaches are compared and issues for discussion are presented.

The geology, structure, and ore potential of various zones at the Heath Steele mine and surrounding area in northern New Brunswick were the subject of intensive study between 1987 and 1989 and in 1993. This document collates material from unpublished company reports with previously published material from the Heath Steele project. The new data and their interpretation are also placed in the context of a rapidly evolving understanding of the geology of northern New Brunswick. After giving an overall geological background on the mine, the document describes the Heath Steele boundary and N-5 zone ore deposits and their setting, including ore zone geology, deformation history, veins and vein history, metamorphism, structural history, and the formation of sulphide gneiss. It then provides a similar description of the ACD zone ore deposits and their setting, and discusses the analysis of non-cylindrical fold structures. Finally, glaciogenic deformation in the mine area is reviewed.

Grain freight rates under competition and regulation : a case study, a working paper

Regina : The Province, 1996. 30 p. : ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-03160 (1 fiche)

The purpose of this paper is to examine the relationship between the level of competition in the grain transportation sector and the freight rate charged to shippers in both a deregulated and regulated market. After an introduction to the study, the second section includes a historical overview of the relationship between the grain industry and the railways in western Canada and the US. Section three contains a theoretical discussion of competition and efficiency criteria, an overview of industrial organization and economic conditions in the rail industry, and a review of alternative solutions to current problems in the rail industry. Sections four and five examine grain freight rates and variable costs at four points, three in the deregulated US market (ranging from a monopoly at Shelby, Montana to a highly competitive market in Kansas City) and one in the regulated Canadian market at Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan. Section six analyzes the margins between rates and variable costs at the specified points. The implications for western Canada are discussed and the paper concludes with a strategy that producers can follow in preparation for the 1999 review of the maximum rate scale.

Greater Toronto Area 3Rs analysis : cost technical appendix -- Draft

The Greater Toronto Area 3Rs (waste reduction, reuse, recycling) analysis identifies and assesses alternative 3R systems, comprised of combinations of 3R programs, technologies, and practices, that could reasonably be implemented in the Area. It also determines the potential for each 3R system to divert waste over the 20-year minimum life expectancy of the Area's landfill sites, and identifies advantages and drawbacks of each system. This technical appendix documents the cost input into the 3R analysis. After an introduction on the study objectives and approach, this report presents residential 3R system cost estimates for existing and alternative 3R systems in the Area's four regional municipalities. It then provides 3R system (existing and alternative) cost estimates for the industrial, commercial, and institutional (ICI) sector. The final section presents results of the net effects analysis of six alternative residential 3R systems costs for each region and for the ICI 3R systems on an Area-wide basis.

The Ontario Waste Management Act directs the Minister of Environment & Energy to provide to the Interim Waste Authority (IWA), which was empowered to conduct environmental assessments (EAs) to locate three landfill sites in the Greater Toronto Area, with waste diversion estimates for use in the IWA EAs. This report provides analytical support to waste diversion estimates provided to the Minister in 1992, and also serves to identify and evaluate alternative waste reduction/reuse/recycling (3R) systems that could be reasonably implemented in the Area. The analysis identified six residential and six industrial, commercial, and institutional 3R systems developed from available 3R components. An evaluation done at a non-site-specific, generic level identified advantages and drawbacks of each potential 3R system, based on such criteria as cost, service impact, and environmental impact. Estimates are provided of the amount of waste that will not be generated due to waste reduction efforts and the amount of waste diverted from disposal due to reuse or recycling efforts.

It also determines the potential for each 3R system to divert waste over the 20-year minimum life expectancy of the Area's landfill sites, and identifies advantages and drawbacks of each system. This technical appendix documents the municipal finance component of the 3R analysis. It identifies and assesses the effect on the local and regional municipalities which may occur as a result of the imple-

After an introduction on the study objectives and approach, this report provides a general description of the waste diversion activities, costs, and financial mechanisms, as well as future waste diversion commitments and municipal finance conditions, in the Area's four regional municipalities. It then presents an assessment of alternative 3R systems from a municipal finance perspective.

The Greater Toronto Area 3Rs (waste reduction, re-use, recycling) analysis identifies and assesses alternative 3R systems that could reasonably be implemented in the Area. This technical appendix documents the service input into the 3R analysis. Service effects in this study are defined as potential for alterations to waste disposal (due to changes in waste generation, composition, or disposal) which may occur as a result of implementation of a 3R system within each of the four regional municipalities. After an introduction on the study objectives and approach, this report presents waste generation and composition estimates and projections for the four regions, as well as a discussion of alternative waste diversions systems and residential system diversion estimates. Separate chapters provide similar information for waste from the industrial, commercial, and institutional (ICI) sector. Six alternative 3R systems are measured and compared, using net effects analysis, for the residential and ICI sectors, and estimates of a wide range of possible waste diversion impacts that could be achieved through different combinations of residential and ICI systems are provided.

One reform which has been proposed to address the inequity of Aboriginal legislative representation is to establish separate, guaranteed seats set aside for Aboriginal representatives, for whom only Aboriginal people could vote. This paper describes the systems of representation adopted in New Zealand and Maine for separate representation of Aboriginal people in their respective legislatures. The focus is on New Zealand, since that country has the most established and sophisticated arrangement for separate representation and is the model most frequently cited by Aboriginal people and students of the subject. The paper then examines recent developments in Canada, outlining the work of the Committee for Aboriginal Electoral Reform and the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Electoral Reform and Party Financing. Finally, it discusses the recent debate in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia about introducing guaranteed Aboriginal seats in those provinces' legislative assemblies.

Summarizes papers commissioned by three working groups of a national forum convened to inform and involve Canadians and advise the federal government on innovative ways to improve the health system and the health of the population. Papers by the Values Working Group explore values and principles that Canadians hold regarding health and health care, and their implications for decision-making. The feasibility of a national ethics advisory committee is also considered. The Striking a Balance Working Group examined how to allocate limited resources to best protect, restore, and promote the health of Canadians. Their papers studied the private/public mix in health care, the federal role, integrated health care models, pharmaceutical policy, and international comparisons. The Evidence-Based Decision Making Working Group considered how individuals, practitioners, and policy makers can have access to and utilize the best available evidence in making decisions. Topics of papers include a national health information network, decision support tools, and consumer involvement in health policy development.

By R. Kardish. Toronto : Ministry of Labour, Health & Safety Policy Branch, Health & Safety Studies Unit, 1992. 24 p. : Bibl. MICROLOG 97-03519 (1 fiche)

This hazardous substance is widely used as a chemical intermediate in the production of epoxy resins and glycerin. This document provides a summary and evaluation of toxicological and epidemiological data on this hazardous substance, based on a review of scientific literature available to date of publication. It reviews the physico-chemical properties, sources, and environmental fate of this hazardous substance, its non-human toxicology, health effects of this hazardous substance on humans and factors affecting human susceptibility, and risk to humans of exposure to this hazardous substance. It concludes with an ambient air quality recommendation for this hazardous substance.

Health effects of occupational exposure to antineoplastic drugs : an integrative research review

By Jeanne B. Hewitt. Toronto : Ministry of Labour, Occupational Disease Panel, 1997. 47 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-03366 (1 fiche)

Antineoplastic drugs (ANDs) have been in clinical use for five decades. There is concern about the potential adverse health effects of ANDs on health care workers (HCWs), but the number and quality of studies conducted to evaluate such effects are limited. This integrative research review focuses on occupational epidemiological studies of HCWs, but also summarizes studies of the toxicity of ANDs in animal models and in patient populations because these data are essential to draw conclusions about causal relationships. Studies reviewed are grouped under the following headings: antineoplastic drug therapy; occupational exposure to ANDs in HCWs; and adverse health effects of ANDs on HCWs.

Health effects of welding and cutting fume, an update : final report

By Gary M. Liss. Toronto : Occupational Disease Panel, 1996. x, 100 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-03365 (2 fiche)

This review of the health effects of welding is limited to effects caused by the gaseous and particulate components of the welding fume. The overall approach taken in the review is to examine the associations between health effects and welding and cutting fume exposure reported in the past ten years. For each outcome, a brief summary is provided of what was known ten years ago, as reported in a similar 1985 review, but the individual references from the earlier document are omitted. The recent findings are then presented, and consistency is sought with the evidence noted in the earlier review. Sections of the review cover acute effects such as bronchitis and pneumonia, chronic respiratory diseases such as chronic respiratory morbidity and fibrosis, non-respiratory chronic effects such as neuropsychiatric symptoms and mutagenesis, and cancer (both lung and non-respiratory). The appendix includes an executive summary of the 1985 review and lists of criteria used to assess the validity of studies.

The state of Oregon has developed a unique and inventive model for addressing the rapidly rising costs and grossly inequitable access to health care in the United States. The state's medical plan is designed to cover a defined range of medical services for the whole population. Under this plan, a list of conditions and their treatments was developed after extensive public consultation, the procedures were ranked in order of priority, and the state is to cover as many of these procedures as it can afford. This paper describes the Oregon health plan model and its current state of implementation, then explores some of the plan's advantages and drawbacks. The paper then discusses elements of the plan which may be usefully examined in Canada.

The review presented in this report is one part of the post-project environmental review undertaken by Manitoba Hydro and the Split Lake Cree. It focuses on about 12 million acres in the Split Lake area, where 35 hydroelectric projects constructed since the 1950s have had some impact. The report first chronicles Manitoba Hydro's projects and activities in the area since 1957, with the beginning of construction of the Kelsey Generating Station. It follows the development of new projects and activities, focusing on hydroelectric generating stations, water management projects; related projects and activities such as transmission lines, access roads, and converter stations are covered in less detail. Information is included on the rationale and role of the projects, timing of their construction and operation, their main physical components, and (where relevant) effects on water levels and flows. The report then documents first-order effects of hydroelectric development on the Split Lake Cree First Nation, including effects on land and on waterways.

Begins with background information on the use of hot spot stress analysis in fatigue life prediction. After a description of the specimen modelled (a stiffened plate representing the typical side longitudinal and transverse bulkhead intersections of an oil tanker), this memorandum outlines the finite element model used (the commercial finite element program ALGOR) and the solution procedure, and summarizes the results. The finite element results are compared with those calculated with simple beam theory, and the effective breadth concept is used to explain the differences.

The first part of this document is a facilitators' guide for use by workshop leaders as they work with educators in using the various components of the Human Rights in the Elementary School/Classroom resources in in-service sessions. The guide is designed to create opportunities for participants to work together to improve their individual and/or school practices in human rights education. The guide is to be used with an interactive video which demonstrates sample teaching practices of Maritime teachers in the elementary classroom. The video focuses on four themes: rules, rights, and responsibilities; establishing a co-operative environment; cross-cultural/global understanding across the curriculum; and human rights issues and values. These themes correspond to themes found in the second part of the document, a teachers' resource manual. The manual documents over 40 examples that Maritime region educators are using to develop a positive attitude on human rights, provides samples of children's literature with human rights themes, and suggests lesson plans and teaching resources to support human rights education at the elementary level.

A bioactive peptide database of ESI-MS spectra was established during the development of high resolution liquid chromatographic ESI-MS analytical methods with a magnetic sector instrument. High resolution ESI-MS data for a variety of bioactive peptides were acquired over a wide mass range by scanning the magnetic sector and calibrating externally with polyethylene glycol standards. Multiply charged ions were observed and errors between observed and theoretical monoisotopic molecular weights are reported. The mass spectra obtained for such peptides as substance P, bradykinins, bombesins, and a Conus snail toxin may now be used for identification of these materials.

In plant ecophysiological research, analysis of chlorophyll-a fluorescence (CF) can be a valuable tool to study environmental effects on three photosynthetic functions. To derive accurate, interpretable information from CF research, it is essential to pay careful attention to potential influences of factors such as time of day and harvesting/collection or storage of tissues prior to assessment. This paper describes experiments investigating diurnal patterns of CF in jack pine, black spruce, and eastern white pine, and the influence on CF of destructive harvest followed by storage of shoots. Practical implications of the findings for research are discussed. The experiments are intended to contribute to the development of sampling and interpretive protocols for the practical application of CF with coniferous tree species, particularly in studying stress effects.

For nearly 30 years, the Ontario Legal Aid Plan operated without serious difficulty. However, by 1994-95 the Plan was facing significant financial problems. This paper begins with a description of the main legal aid models employed in Canada today, then provides a brief history and overview of the Ontario Legal Aid Plan and notes some of the causes of the Plan's recent difficulties. The paper concludes with a statistical comparison of legal aid plans in Canada, with emphasis on the performance of the Ontario plan.

Les séances de travail consacrées aux opérations de la Banque sur les marchés financiers visaient à mieux faire connaître aux opérateurs et aux universitaires le mode d'intervention de cette dernière sur les marchés. La première séance a mis en lumière la façon dont la Banque établit quotidiennement le niveau des encaisses de règlement mises à la disposition des adhérents, ainsi que l'incidence de cette activité sur le taux des fonds à un jour. La deuxième séance a passé en revue le lien qui existe entre l'établissement du niveau des encaisses et le niveau des conditions monétaires. La dernière séance a traité des contraintes d'ordre tactique auxquelles la Banque fait face lorsqu'elle s'efforce d'assouplir les conditions monétaires et a mis en évidence l'appui que la transparence peut apporter à la conduite de la politique monétaire.

Measurement of diffusive properties of intact rock

Peer review of the geosphere model used in the case study for the environmental impact assessment of the Canadian Nuclear Fuel Waste Management Program has identified the need to quantify the properties of the intact rock surrounding the disposal vault that would control the transport of radionuclides by diffusion. A literature survey suggests that measurement of electrical resistivity of the rock is a rapid, non-invasive test that could be appropriate to evaluate the rock in the exclusion zone around the disposal vault. Measurement of rock resistivity allows calculation of the formation factor (FF) for a rock, and theoretical relationships exist between FF and other properties related to diffusion in the rock. This review describes and discusses the theoretical relationships that exist between FF, diffusivity, permeability, and porosity, and how these properties might be measured or inferred for in-situ rock under the conditions that apply to the intact rock surrounding a potential disposal vault. The importance of measuring the intrinsic diffusion coefficient of diffusing species under solution salinities simulating those of groundwaters is emphasized, and a method of measurement is presented which is independent of the diffusing medium.

Missinabi Provincial Park is 501 kilometres in length along a major tributary in the Moose River watershed in northern Ontario. The park has been nominated to the Canadian Heritage River System for its scenic beauty, varied natural heritage features, importance as a major fur trading route in Canada's early development, and the potential it offers to visitors for an extended wilderness canoe-camping experience. This preliminary management plan document presents the objectives for the park and describes the park's zoning, resource management policies, operations policies, development policies, and plan implementation priorities. It also summarizes the public consultation held to receive input to the park planning process.

Modafinil, d-amphetamine and placebo during 64 hours of sustained mental work, I : effects on mood, fatigue, cognitive performance and body temperature

Modafinil (diphenylmethyl-sulfinyl-2 acetamide) is an alerting substance that is considered safer than amphetamine with fewer side effects. This paper describes experiments to improve understanding of the ability of modafinil to ameliorate fatigue and declines in mental performance due to sleep deprivation. In the experiments, 41 military subjects received either 300 milligrams of modafinil, 20 milligrams of d-amphetamine, or a placebo during 64 hours of continuous cognitive work and sleep loss. Three drug treatments were given: at 23:30 hours and 05:30 hours during the first and second sleep-deprived nights, and once at 15:30 hours during the third day of continuous work. Subjective estimates of mood, fatigue, and sleepiness, as well as objective measures of reaction time, logical reasoning, and short-term memory were used to evaluate the performance of modafinil versus amphetamine relative to the placebo.

A Model for the delivery of alcohol and drug services in the Northwest Territories

Northwest Territories. Dept. of Social Services. Yellowknife : The Dept., 1987. 11 p.
MICROLOG 97-03132 (1 fiche)

Presents a model for delivering alcohol and drug services in the Northwest Territories which emphasizes community-based service delivery programs that are locally controlled and supported by Regional Social Service staff. The model establishes the Alcohol & Drug Coordinating Council as a Board of Management directly accountable to the Ministry of Social Services with the primary responsibility for co-ordinating community projects and funding. Emphasis is also placed on decentralization of support staff to ensure effective program delivery at the local level. Background information on the Council and a list of program principles are included.

Modelling farm-retail price linkage for eight agricultural commodities

By Daniel V. Gordon and Tim Hazledine. Ottawa : Agriculture & Agri-Food Canada, Policy Branch, 1996. vi, 48 p. : Ill., Bibl. (Technical report / Canada. Agriculture Canada. Policy Branch ; 1/96)
MICROLOG 97-03359 (1 fiche)

Investigates the linkage between farm and retail prices for eight agricultural commodities in Canada: beef, pork, eggs, chicken, milk, cheese, butter, and ice cream. The purpose is to measure summary statistics, specifically elasticities, that relate the farm commodity to the retail commodity. The theoretical framework for the study is based on standard supply and demand relationships for both the farm and retail sectors, and the equilibrium is solved under general competitive conditions. The empirical model developed allows for non-market clearing conditions (i.e. inventories) and for dynamic adjustments to shocks in the farm and retail sectors. The model takes into account the presence of supply restricting marketing boards and the North American trade in beef and pork. The focus is on generating appropriate and useful estimates of price transmission elasticity between retail and farm prices.

Contains information to be used in developing comprehensive land use guidelines for the Moosonee Administrative District of the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources, and also summarizes land use and resource-related problems and issues that have been communicated to Ministry staff. Begins with a general analysis of the District, including its history, climate, physiography, vegetation, population, land tenure, and infrastructure. An analysis of such resources as minerals, forests, peat, water, fisheries, wildlife, recreation areas, and agriculture follows. Constraints on development in the District, including environmental constraints and development controls, are also discussed, and some proposed developments in the District are briefly reviewed. Finally, specific issues such as land claims, tourism and resource development, flooding, land use, and mercury contamination are listed.

Ce document est destiné à ces entreprises. Il a pour objectifs de sensibiliser ces dernières aux problèmes environnementaux consécutifs à l'utilisation d'équipements de nettoyage qui n'offrent pas la capacité de récupérer adéquatement le perchloroéthylène, et de présenter les changements à venir concernant l'utilisation de ce solvant. Une alternative au nettoyage à sec est ensuite présentée; il s'agit de l'aquaneettoyage. Les résultats de la démonstration réalisée en Ontario sont fournis et discutés en y faisant ressortir les particularités de l'aquaneettoyage et la part du marché qu'il pourrait occuper. By David N. Swingler. Dartmouth, NS : National Defence, Research & Development Branch, Defence Research Establishment Atlantic, 1992. 72 p. : Ill., Bibl. (DREA contractor report / Defence Research Establishment Atlantic ; DREA CR/92/420)

Summarizes work performed on the application of back-propagation neural nets to transient analysis of underwater acoustic data. After an introduction, the second section details the pre-processing of time series data recorded in Baffin Bay in which fast Fourier transforms are used to move into the frequency domain where event selection (transient detection) and non-neural event classification are accomplished. The latter is employed as a simple means to pre-classify events by machine, thus ensuring an adequate supply of exemplars need for the training/learning phase of a neural network classifier. Section 3 details the design and performance of simple back-propagation neural nets using the above data. Various methods of improving the learning time of the neural nets are discussed. For comparison, a k-nearest neighbour algorithm is applied to the data and its performance investigated.

The New Brunswick Biotechnology & Technological Innovations Strategy has the main goal of strengthening the province's rural and resource-based economy through the development, application, and commercialization of biotechnology and technological innovations. This document begins with background on the province's agriculture and agri-food industry, and the strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats with regard to establishing a strong agricultural biotechnology industry in New Brunswick. It then reviews the biotechnology business cycle and presents the Strategy, starting with its objectives and principles. The Strategy is in three phases: creation of a centre of biotechnology excellence; strengthening the biotechnology research and human resource base; and expansion of an initial focus on agriculture and agri-food to include other resource industries such as forestry, fisheries, and aquaculture.

A Non-linear dose-response model with an application to the reconstruction of the human mortality response surface from acute inhalation toxicity with sarin

By Eugene C. Yee, Ralston, AB : National Defence, Defence Research Establishment Suffield, 1996. viii, 25 p. : ill., Bibl. (Suffield memorandum / Defence Research Establishment Suffield ; no. 1476)

MICROLOG 97-03107 (1 fiche)

Describes the use of a non-linear toxic load in conjunction with the probit method for the characterization of the time-concentration-mortality (TCM) relationship of a toxic gas. The basic principles underlying the extrapolation of the TCM relationships from animals to humans are examined and the methods are illustrated with reference to the re-evaluation of raw data from a previously published study of a large-scale experiment on the acute inhalation toxicity of sarin. For the four animal species used in this study (rats, mice, guinea pigs, pigeons), the parameters in the probit relationship have been derived using a maximum likelihood method based on the binomial distribution. A human acute inhalation toxicity model for sarin intoxication is developed from these results. The model can then be used to provide an estimate for lethality values for humans as a function of exposure time.

Notes on the calculation of the field of a horizontal electric dipole

By Harold S. Wilson. Dartmouth, NS : National Defence, Research & Development Branch, Defence Research Establishment Atlantic, 1996. vi, 30 p. : ///. Bibl. (DREA technical memorandum / Defence Research Establishment Atlantic ; 96/208)
MICROLOG 97-03091 (1 fiche)

Presents an overview of the calculation of the electric and magnetic fields of a horizontal electric dipole (HED) source submerged in deep sea water (a conducting half-space). The Maxwell equations are solved for a point HED source and complete quasi-static expressions for field components are listed. The analytic solution for the fields in the water is given in a form without singularities. A method is also described for increasing the speed of numerical evaluation of the integrals appearing in exact expressions for the fields. Approximate solutions for the fields are listed in the last section, and the exact quasi-static results are compared with approximate solutions.

This study attempts to develop an equivalent axisymmetric fragment simulating projectile (FSP) to represent a non-axisymmetric standard FSP for the development of calibration curves for witness packs (targets used to study effects of behind-armour debris and to obtain threat/armour interaction data), using numerical simulation. Three different FSP models were investigated. In the first model, the cutting edge perimeter of the true FSP was conserved. For the second model, the presented area of the true FSP on impact was conserved. For the third model, the bevel angle was conserved. The results obtained indicate which model conditions result in a ballistic limit curve matching that of the true FSP.

The new territory of Nunavut is scheduled to become a reality in 1999. Part of the vision for Nunavut includes a workforce representative of the territorial population. The human resources development strategy outlined in this document addresses the need for human resources development activities to meet the goal of representativeness in the public service and the target of 50% Inuit employment by 1999. It also provides strategic initiatives that address the goal of representative Inuit employment with other public sector organizations and businesses. The strategy includes an assessment of current training programs and initiatives in Nunavut and projected employment demands resulting from implementation of the Nunavut Land Claim Agreement. The strategy also considers the future employment and training needs of the private sector resulting from secondary growth and construction related to the creation of Nunavut as well as normal growth reflecting current and projected demographics.

As a first step in developing effluent regulations for Ontario's Municipal-Industrial Strategy for Abatement (MISA) program, the best available pollution control technologies available for removal of contaminants must be evaluated, and performance and cost impacts determined. This report describes methods used in a study of the best available technologies (BAT) applicable to the Ontario organic chemical manufacturing sector, and discusses the BAT option selection process and the costs of the selected BAT option models for each plant. Underlying costing assumptions and methods are presented in Appendix A. BAT options reports showing BAT models selected, their performance, and costs for individual plant sites are included in Appendix B. This appendix provides plant descriptions, describes plant wastewater sources and quality, and discusses the rationale for selecting the BAT options. Extensive monitoring data on plant contaminants are also provided.

Presents a study aimed at identifying the housing conditions and needs of immigrant women and racial minority women. Begins with background on housing policy and its market dominance, housing inequities and discrimination, and the nature of women's migration to Canada. The second part analyzes quantitative data to determine the relative situation of immigrant and racial minority women in housing based on such variables as gender, racial status, immigration status, income, tenure, dwelling size, household type, and immigration period. The third part presents results of interviews conducted with 22 women living in Canada's largest immigrant-receiving cities. The women discussed their housing conditions and the difficulties they faced under four major themes: citizenship and the rights it confers, discrimination, advocacy and the promotion of rights, and racism. The section emphasizes the diversity of the women's experience and highlights the common obstacles they had to overcome as well as their efforts to secure adequate housing.

Procedures for the design of high mast pole foundations

Downsview, ON : Ministry of Transportation, Structural Office, Design Section, 1994. 71 p. : Ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-03458 (1 fiche)

Presents procedures for the design of foundations for high mast poles subject to wind loads and used in highway lighting applications. The design procedures are based on papers by Broms (1964) on cohesive and cohesionless soils, and account for the effects of frost depth, socketing in bedrock, layered soils, and foundations entirely in bedrock. Foundation piles are classified into three categories in accordance with the findings in the Broms papers, depending on the relative stiffnesses between the soil and the pile. Lateral deflections are calculated using the concept of lateral subgrade reaction where the soil pressure on the pile varies with the soil deflection. Example calculations are included. The appendix describes a program to determine foundation information and provides design aids that can be used to determine foundation length in most situations.

Le Programme national d'assainissement des lieux contaminés : Rapport annuel 1994-95

Winnipeg : Conseil canadien des ministres de l'environnement, 1995. 36, 34 p.
MICROLOG 97-03581 (1 fiche)

En 1989, le Conseil canadien des ministres de l'Environnement lançait ce Programme de 5 ans. Le Programme s'occupe des lieux qui ont été pollués par des produits dangereux d'origine industrielle ou commerciale. Le but du PNALC est d'assurer la dépollution des lieux contaminés si cette contamination nuit à la santé humaine ou à la qualité de l'environnement. Ce rapport traite des ententes bilatérales, de la décontamination des lieux orphelins, du programme de développement et de démonstration de techniques d'assainissement de lieux contaminés (DETALC), la responsabilité à l'égard des lieux contaminés, les activités du secteur privé, la décontamination des terres publiques fédérales, la formation, et des projets de décontamination dans chaque province.

A Proposed framework to assess cumulative environmental effects in Canadian national parks

By Sarah A. Kaiff. Halifax : Canadian Heritage, Parks Canada, Atlantic Regional Office, Historic Properties, 1995. x, 140 p. : Ill., Maps, Bibl. (Technical report in ecosystem science / Parks Canada ; Report #1 ISSN 1200-3298) ISBN 0-662-23853-2 CCG-P no. R56/1-1-1995E MICROLOG 97-03572 (2 fiche)

This report proposes a framework that promotes cumulative impact assessment (CEA) as a decision-making process where information on the ecological integrity of national parks is integrated into park management planning. Research for the development of the framework includes a literature review, interviews with park managers and cumulative effects specialists, and field work in two Atlantic region parks. Two illustrations using a project from each park helped refine the framework and ensure its utility. The framework links three components: sources of cumulative environmental change, assessment of this change, and the options available to manage cumulative effects. The framework establishes a link between local effects induced by specific projects or activities and overall park ecological integrity by highlighting the relationship between project-specific environmental assessment and park planning. CEA is the bridge between these two management activities. The report focuses mainly on the assessment portion of the framework and provides a series of steps to assist in conducting CEAs. The steps are organized into three tiers of analysis that correlate with regional, park, and project site scales. The framework also directs the assessor to examine broad temporal scales.

The main goal of this document is to provide an information resource and discussion paper for those working in the field of mental health and considering the use of quality-of-life (QoL) assessment in their clinical practice, evaluation activities, or research projects. The document reviews current QoL instruments, measurement issues, and evaluation methods. After an introduction, chapter 2 reviews 28 instruments as to the domains of QoL they address, the methods by which they are administered, and the types of data they collect. Chapter 3 first reviews the fundamentals of instrument reliability and validity and provides psychometric ratings for each, based on evidence from the literature. Chapter 4 addresses some central issues which QoL evaluation raises with regard to service delivery planning and policy formation. The final chapter presents a more detailed psychometric description as well as sourcing information for the QoL instruments reviewed.

Avant 1994, chacune des écoles faisait des sondages consécutifs de leurs diplômés, mais pas les universités. Après avoir reconnu le besoin d'obtenir des informations continues indiquant dans quelle mesure les diplômés en soins infirmiers réussissent à se trouver du travail, le ministère de l'Enseignement supérieur et du Travail, après avoir consulté les établissements d'enseignement et d'autres partis, s'est livré à un sondage des diplômés des 7 établissements qui offrent un programme de sciences infirmières dans la province. Ce sondage visait tous les diplômés de l'année précédente. Des questions ont été posées aux diplômés concernant leurs activités sur le marché du travail durant une semaine de référence. Ce rapport a 2 parties. La première présente l'ensemble des résultats de tous les programmes, soit aussi bien des écoles de soins infirmiers que des programmes universitaires. Les informations sont présentées d'après les indicateurs-clés, comme le taux d'emploi, l'emploi au Nouveau-Brunswick, les emplois ayant un rapport, le statut de l'emploi, les heures de travail, etc. La deuxième partie donne des informations sur la participation au marché du travail et sur l'emploi au niveau du programme. Northwest Territories. Liquor Law Review. Yellowknife : Safety & Public Services, 1994. viii, 46 p. : Ill. MICROLOG 97-03076 (1 fiche)

The Northwest Territories Liquor Law Review was established to identify a new legislative foundation for the way liquor should be regulated, through extensive consultations in all regions. This paper is intended to summarize the concerns, recommendations, and proposals received to date during the Review. It outlines a number of principles and strategies that could be used to form the basis of new legislation. It describes the consultation and review process and discusses such issues as locally-made solutions, the scope and function of liquor legislation, desired outcomes of legislation, the government's role in liquor sales, eligibility to sell and consume liquor, enforcement of liquor laws, and empowerment of communities. ### Reconnaissance biogeochemical survey, central Nova Scotia, parts of NTS 11D,E, and 21A,H : part 1, balsam fir twigs

By Colin E. Dunn, R.G. Balma and W.A. Spirito. Ottawa : Natural Resources Canada, Geological Survey of Canada, 1996. 165 p. : Maps, Bibl. (Open file / Geological Survey of Canada ; 3221) Fold. maps not filmed. MICROLOG 97-03701 (4 fiche)

This report presents data from a survey of element concentrations and distributions in balsam fir twigs collected in a biogeochemical survey in central Nova Scotia. The report includes a description of the study methodology, field observations, data listings, statistical summaries, a geology and sample location map, and element distribution maps that show concentrations in the ash of balsam fir twigs of 28 elements in sufficient concentration to be detected and quantified by instrumental neutron activation analysis, and for 14 elements determined by inductively coupled plasma emission spectroscopy. All data reported are concentrations in ash remaining after controlled ignition at 470 degrees C. The ashing process concentrates the elements with little or no loss of elements except those of high volatility such as bromine and mercury. AP CA LS ND NR SC

Regional distribution of federal corporate tax expenditures

This study, the first of a series on federal tax expenditures, establishes the province-by-province distribution of 26 tax breaks that are built into the tax structure and designed to benefit corporations in Canada. The first section provides a brief definition of the benchmark tax system, which is then used to determine which measures are in fact tax expenditures (or spending by not taxing). The study attempts to put in perspective the scale of lost revenues for the federal treasury. In this respect, tax expenditures are considered first as a whole and then by category. The study then estimates the distribution of tax expenditures across provinces and finally presents an analysis of both this distribution and that of federal corporate subsidies. CA CI CO PA SS ST

Regional integration and cooperation in West Africa, a multidimensional perspective

This book contains a collection of papers that examine the failure of regional integration and co-operation to date in west Africa and that explore some of the options for the revitalization of such initiatives. The papers are arranged in three categories: strategic visions and prospects for regional integration and co-operation; economic perspectives; and political dimensions. Specific topics include the role of the Economic Community of West African States; theoretical models and approaches to regional integration; the role of community building in regional integration; partnerships for innovation; national policies as impediments to economic integration; parallel trade as a form of economic subversion; lessons from the West African Monetary Union; human rights and integration; the regional dimension of environmental management; and power sharing at the regional level.

The Pinchi Lake regional lake sediment and water geochemistry survey described in this report covers an area of perceived high mineral potential in a region where exploration has previously been limited by extensive drift cover, poor exposures, and an insufficient geological database. Survey investigators collected lake sediments and waters from 413 sites in the study area and analyzed for 15 elements by atomic absorption spectroscopy and for a further 25 elements by instrumental neutron activation analysis. This report describes the survey areas (location, access, physiography, surficial and bedrock geology, mineral deposits), survey methodology, and quality control procedures, and presents a preliminary interpretation of the data obtained, notably for gold. New areas for prospective porphyry-style gold/copper and molybdenum deposits are outlined, and recommendations are provided for gold exploration in the study area. Appendices contain analytical data.

In March 1994, the Northwest Territories government tabled "Renewed Partnerships," its final response to a committee report examining the delivery of health and social programs. That document outlined the steps that the government would take to carry out the renewal of its health and social programs in the coming years. This update highlights the government's progress on the commitments made in that document, with special attention to those recommendations of the committee that required a progress report to the Legislative Assembly. The recommendations and government responses are discussed under the headings of: partnerships in government, partnerships in service delivery, learning from traditional knowledge, strengthening the family, income security reform, helping victims of violence, treating and preventing addictions, supporting front-line workers, and changing attitudes and behaviours.

Renovation strategies for brick veneer steel stud wall construction, task 2 : four remedial tie systems for BV/SS walls : development & conformance testing

By M.A. Postma and Eric F. Burnett. Ottawa : Canada Mortgage & Housing Corporation, 1993. xii, 179 p. : ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-03370 (3 fiche)

Describes a test program to establish and document the performance of retrofit tie systems for brick veneer/steel stud walls. Specific objectives of the program were: to evaluate and assess the capabilities of four retrofit tie systems, two suited for retrofit from the exterior and two for installation working solely from the interior; to identify and apply the relevant performance requirements to the four systems; and to discuss the issues involved in connecting the brick veneer to the steel stud framing by means of ties, especially from a repair or retrofit perspective. The test program involved 435 tests of individual tie-stud connections which were assessed with respect to structural performance, specifically structural safety and serviceability. The test program included assessment of the influence of stud deformation and of cyclic loading. Recommendations are provided regarding the choice of an appropriate supplementary tie system.

Renovation strategies for brick veneer steel stud wall construction, task 3 : some performance considerations

By C.I. Wegner and Eric F. Burnett. Ottawa : Canada Mortgage & Housing Corporation, 1994. viii, 62 p. : ill., Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-03369 (1 fiche)

Documents a study of the likely performance of brick veneer/steel stud (BV/SS) walls after tie remediation, with particular regard to thermal bridging, installation damage, drainage, corrosion, and torsional stiffness of the steel studs. Five BV/SS tie systems were investigated. Since any remedial tie will penetrate the cavity between the veneer and the wall, various layers of material, some of the thermal insulation, and the stud space, it was also necessary to address specific issues such as air leakage, water penetration, and the potential for the use of cavity fillers. Recommendations are provided with regard to the remediation of BV/SS systems and ties.

Renovation strategies for brick veneer steel stud wall construction, task 4 : Dinal remedial tie system

By C.I. Wegner and Eric F. Burnett. Ottawa : Canadian Mortgage & Housing Corporation, 1994. v,

MICROLOG 97-03367 (1 fiche)

The Dinal tie comprises a threaded steel rod with a collapsible fastener that provides a means for attachment of a steel stud to brick veneer. The tie was developed in response to the failure of some brick tie systems and can be installed through existing masonry veneer and attached to the steel stud backup without removing any existing veneer, thus providing the potential for use in retrofit applications. This report describes tests conducted to determine the structural capabilities of the Dinal tie to steel stud connection and to develop likely design values. The test program included both tension (pullout) and compression tests on two different set-ups, each with different degrees of stud restraint. Service load considerations such as the effect of cyclic loading, the magnitude of the initial stiffness, and the contribution of secondary displacements including the local deformation of the steel stud are quantified, and safety considerations are also taken into account. Tentative service load design strengths are presented along with minimum pullout stiffness values.

Synthesizes work performed in four tasks of a research, development, and demonstration program undertaken to develop various strategies for the remediation and control of problems in existing brick veneer/steel stud (BV/SS) wall systems. The first task had the main goal of identifying, demonstrating, assessing, and documenting methods of providing supplemental ties on BV/SS buildings. The second task involved a test program to establish and document the structural performance of four retrofit tie systems, chosen from the 11 considered in the first task. The test program addressed numerous design- and code-related issues. Task 3 involved testing and/or assessment of the likely performance of BV/SS walls after remediation, with particular regard to considerations such as thermal bridging, condensation, drainage, corrosion, and stiffness. In task 4, the Dinal remedial tie system was tested and assessed.

Reorganization of Saskatchewan's health labour relations

Saskatchewan. Health Labour Relations Reorganization Commission. Regina : The Commission, 1997. 351 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-03309 (4 fiche)

The reorganization of the Saskatchewan health care system into an integrated, decentralized framework has required corresponding changes in the organization of provincial health care labour. The complexity and the problems associated with reorganizing 538 bargaining units led to establishment of a provincial commission to examine the organization of labour relations between health sector employees and employers, and to make regulations reorganizing those relations. This document is the report of that commission. It reviews the intended future vision and structure of the reorganized health system, the labour relations organization before regionalization, the problems with union rivalries and jurisdictional disputes, the commission's process and mandate, and the final reorganization that reduced the 538 bargaining units to 45. Appendices include text of the Health Labour Relations Reorganization Act and the commission's regulations; a list of trade unions and locals; an interim reorganization proposal; commission information bulletins; and a table showing employee representation by trade union, employer, and bargaining unit.

The Northwest Territories Access to Information and Protection of Privacy Act was passed in 1994 but is not currently in force. The legislation specifies that it must come into force by the end of 1996. The Act provides the public with a right to access information held by government, subject to specific and limited exemptions; allows individuals to correct information held by government; and protects rights of third parties who may be affected by the release of information. This report presents findings of a working group that reviewed the Act, the current access legislation in Canada and practices across the country, interjurisdictional information on Access Commissioner offices, and options for dealing with access to information. The group considered six options, including maintenance of the status quo, delaying or repealing the Act, amending the Act, and providing guidelines.

Presents findings of an investigation into factors that might be placing Ontario Ministry of Finance employees at increased risk of miscarriage. The investigation employed the case control method, in which exposure risk factors of all women who miscarried are compared to those of a sample of women who had normal pregnancies. The women eligible for the investigation were all Oshawa employees who reported miscarriages in an earlier phase of the study and a sample of randomly selected matched controls who reported normal pregnancies in the same year that the case miscarried. Study methodology involved a questionnaire with major areas of inquiry covering ergonomic factors such as posture, lifting requirements, and light and noise at the work station; usage of equipment such as photocopiers and display terminals; and stress factors such as job satisfaction. The appendix contains a copy of the questionnaire.

Describes rescue excavations carried out on two threatened sites, 1994-95, in the Donjek Valley of Klutane National Park, Yukon. The objectives of the excavations were to salvage cultural deposits eroding from the edge of the high bluff overlooking the Donjek River gravel bars, and to gather environmental data to better understand the context of human occupation and land use in the valley in antiquity. Background is provided on the valley's animal life and its environmental history since the last glaciation. Features uncovered include stone tools, hearths, a birch bark container, and faunal remains. Includes glossary.

Generational accounting is a relatively new method that directly measures the degree to which future generations will face a higher fiscal burden than living generations. This paper introduces generational accounting for Canada, assessing both the repercussions for future Canadians if government fiscal policy is not altered soon and the magnitude of change required to achieve generational balance. The first section makes the case for generational accounting, explaining why conventional deficit measures provide little or no guide to the true stance of fiscal policy. Section two briefly describes how the accounts are constructed and includes a simple numerical example. Section three presents the Canadian accounts, including examination of the impact of 1995 federal budget proposals on living and future generations. This section also compares Canadian and US generational accounts.

Le Ministère de l'Éducation organise, pour l'enseignement secondaire, 3 sessions d'examen par année scolaire, celles de janvier, de juin et d'août. Pour chacune de ces sessions, il élabore des épreuves qui s'ajoutent à celles qui sont préparées par les organismes scolaires. Ainsi, chaque élève reçoit, à la fin de chacune de ses 3 dernières années d'études secondaires, un relevé de ses résultats; de même, chaque commission scolaire ou école privée reçoit un rapport sur les résultats de ses élèves aux épreuves du Ministère et à ses propres épreuves. Ce document, qui présente les résultats aux épreuves unique de juin par établissement privé, comprend 3 parties: la sanction des études; les résultats d'ensemble par établissement et par région administrative; les résultats d'ensemble et par épreuve par établissement. ## Review of cumulative impact of program and service changes on seniors : technical data and graphs

Edmonton : Alberta Community Development, Seniors Policy & Programs, 1996. il, 130 p. : III. MICROLOG 97-03341 (3 fiche)

Presents estimates of cumulative impacts of social program and service changes on Alberta seniors under various scenarios, each scenario having two components: expenditures, separated into the categories of shelter, basic needs, and health; and income, as identified by examining federal and provincial income support programs relative to personal income. Individual scenarios are developed for single seniors, two-senior couples, one-senior couples with one spouse age 60-64, and one-senior couples with spouse under age 60 living in the following types of residences: lodges, continuing care facilities, subsidized rental accommodation, non-subsidized rental accommodation, mobile homes, and individually owned homes. In addition, scenarios are developed for alternative residential situations where one senior in a couple may live in the community and the other in a lodge or continuing care facility, or where a senior is faced with a temporary stay in a continuing care facility while maintaining a permanent residence elsewhere. By Sylvia Coming and Ben Parfitt. Victoria : Ministry of Forests, Revenue Branch, 1996. il, 125 p. : III. MICROLOG 97-03520 (2 fiche)

Presents findings of a review of British Columbia log salvage regulations in response to salvage industry concerns since the last review in 1981. The review was undertaken to: identify issues of concern to log salvors, the forest industry, the log salvage receiving station, the Ministry of Forests, and law enforcement agencies; to receive and evaluate submissions on the merits of proposed changes in the regulations; and to recommend appropriate measures that would bring about an orderly and equitable system for log recovery, and a stable relationship among parties involved. Issues to be addressed and recommendations are discussed in such categories as salvage permitting, bonding, log security, enforcement of regulations, salvor education, salvaged log pricing, theft, wood processing by salvors, stumpage fees, and salvage districts. The appendix includes results of a survey of the log salvage industry. BC FO PR SC

Sampling protocols for the rapid bioassessment of streams and lakes using benthic macroinvertebrates

Prepared by S.M. David...et al. Toronto : Ministry of Environment & Energy, 1996. II, 29 p. : Ill., Bibl. ISBN 0-7778-5931-9
MICROLOG 97-03206 (1 fiche)

Macroinvertebrates are relatively sedentary, exhibit varying tolerances to physical and chemical changes, and are widespread in distribution. Consequently, macroinvertebrate collections are extensively used as a means to assess water quality in streams and lakes. If species are identified to the genus or species taxonomic level, macroinvertebrate sampling and processing can be very expensive. This publication describes experimental rapid bioassessment protocols developed to complement standard methods of macroinvertebrate monitoring. The goal of these protocols is to provide an inexpensive, relatively accurate screening tool that can be used by those with little or no experience in aquatic ecology. Sections of the document cover site selection, equipment, sampling procedures, data recording, picking samples, identification of animals to taxonomic order, sample submission, and data evaluation. The appendix includes an illustrated guide to distinguishing characteristics of aquatic invertebrates.

The Ontario Workers' Compensation Act requires Schedule 2 employers to be individually liable for compensation costs. The Act provides no clear-cut mechanism to recoup costs from other employers if an accident employer defaults permanently on payments. The Workers' Compensation Board released a discussion paper in 1993 outlining its current practices and associated problems for funding Schedule 2 claims. This report contains an interpretive summary of the views expressed by Schedule 2 stakeholders both in their submissions and during meetings regarding funding issues raised in the discussion paper. ### Second stage housing for native women

Ohsweken, ON : Native Women's Assn of Canada, 1994. I, 57 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-03398 (1 fiche)

Describes research conducted to establish the need for second stage housing for Native women. The research involved studying of five Native-initiated first-stage or emergency crisis shelters for women, interviews with shelter or project directors and/or organizers, and consulting Native and family violence databases. Includes a historical overview of the reasons for the high incidence of abuse of Native women. Issues discussed include the degree of shelter use, the distinctiveness of Native women's needs, the extent to which shelter programs were based on Native traditions and Native elder input, the meaning of culturally appropriate therapy in the Native sense, the appropriateness of feminist theory, Native inmate services, shelter design and security, relations between shelter staff and Native women clients, and shelter funding.

Sediment pigment stratigraphy as evidence of long term changes in primary productivity of Sturgeon and Rice lakes

By Marius Rybak and Izabela Rybak. Toronto : Ministry of Environment & Energy ; Ministry of Natural Resources ; Ottawa : Environment Canada, Parks Service, Trent-Severn Waterway, 1994. III, 44 p. : ill., Bibl. (R/S technical report / Ontario Ministry of Environment & Energy and Canadian Parks Service, Trent-Severn Waterway ; no. 4) On cover: Rice and Sturgeon Lakes Nutrient Budget Study. ISBN 0-7778-1129-4
MICROLOG 97-03296 (1 fiche)

Describes a paleolimnological study initiated to address specific questions about the trophic development of Rice and Sturgeon lakes in the Kewartha Lakes area of Ontario: whether the record of changes in blue-green algal populations could be interpreted from pigments preserved in lake sediments; whether lake productivity had changed recently; whether the hypolimnetic regime had differed in the past; and whether evidence of past changes in water quality could be dated using the lead-210 radionuclide method. Development of blue-green algae was traced through myxoxanthophyll, and the abundance of Oscillatoria was estimated using oscillaxanthin, a pigment unique to the Oscillatoriaceae. Concentrations of the two pigments were determined by solvent sorption. A stratigraphic sequence was also developed for chlorophyll derivatives to total chlorophyll ratios in order to elucidate the components of the eutrophication process in both lakes.

This report describes a study conducted to obtain a better understanding of the pattern of adaptive variation of jack pine that would improve existing seed transfer guidelines. A short-term provenance test was conducted for 102 seed sources grown in common environments at a greenhouse for one season and at three field trials for two growing seasons. In the study, 32 biological variables were determined for each seed source, including seedling heights, needle flushing dates, timing of shoot elongation, and relative freezing damage. Multiple regressions were run for each variable against 12 climatic variables interpolated for each of the seed sources using a geographic information system (GIS). Principal components analysis summarized the main components of variation. Regression equations were used to model patterns of adaptive variation, and these patterns were graphically reproduced as contour maps using GIS. A series of focal point seed zone maps were then produced by GIS intersection of the regression-based contour maps. Based on these maps, a summary of the pattern of adaptive variation in jack pine was used to produce a recommendation for breeding zone boundaries.

Presents results of a survey of water, sediment, and benthic samples collected from 17 stations in the St. Lawrence River near Cornwall, Ontario in 1991. The main focus of the work was to assess the sediment as a source of mercury to biota. Benthic macroinvertebrates were collected for total mercury analysis, and sediment and water were also analyzed for a variety of other metals, nutrients, and physical parameters. In particular, sediment was analyzed for total mercury and methyl mercury. Site selection for the sampling stations was based on the location of open-water and shore-based discharges from various industrial plants in the Cornwall area, as well as on results from two previous sediment surveys. Results are compared with historical data and with results at control sites located upstream from the plants.

This is one of a series of reports that synthesize the results of stakeholder consultations on potential opportunities for sustainable development. Based on commissioned research and national consultation, this report aims to provide up-to-date information to optimize environmental and economic goals in the delivery of water and wastewater services in Canada. It begins with an analysis of the Canadian water/wastewater system, its service and capital realities, its infrastructure, and fiscal trends. It then outlines a way toward a more rational water/wastewater system, discussing full-cost user-pay principles and opportunities for public/private partnerships in infrastructure. Benefits of a more rational system are noted and results of a national multi-stakeholder consultation are summarized. Concludes with advice to such stakeholders as governments, labour, environmental groups, professionals, and financiers.

Previous studies have shown that the percentage of repeat spawners in the spring rainbow trout spawning migration was a useful and easily obtained index of the status of spawning stocks. This report describes an angler survey of catches of rainbow trout from Canadian Lake Superior tributaries. A total of 3,186 samples from 58 streams were obtained during the spring spawning migrations. The anglers recorded data on fish length and sex, and sent scale samples to be examined for spawning history. Repeat spawning rates were used to index the effects of fishing mortality by tributary and geographic location. Various options for management of rainbow trout populations are summarized.

Summarizes four separate and distinct studies that identify the environmental impacts of hydroelectric development since the late 1950s on the Split Lake Cree traditional resource area in Manitoba. The first study focuses on the key events shaping the lives of the Split Lake Cree from the early 20th century to the mid-1990s, identifying and analyzing important changes in the First Nation's evolution against a broad historical background. The second study identifies all hydroelectric, transmission-line, and related projects and activities in the study area, their history, and their effects on the area's land base and on the flows and levels of its waterways. The third study tabulates current information pertaining the effects of hydroelectric and transmission-line projects on the First Nation, including both Cree knowledge and experience and scientific data and analysis. The fourth study evaluates the adequacy of the environmental baseline information in the study area that is required to measure impacts from future hydro projects.

Summary of the 1986 fall tagging and netting on Flack Lake, project 86-03

Describes a netting survey undertaken on Flack Lake (Raimbault Township, Blind River District, Ontario) in fall 1986, primarily to tag and mark lake trout (Salvelinus namaycush) so that an exploitation rate and population estimate could be made from fish recaptured in the spring sport fishery. In addition, the survey provided a large sample of lake trout for estimates of growth, age, and maturity. In addition to the netting survey results, an assessment of four shoals as potential spawning sites for lake trout is presented.

This report presents a review of the domestic and international literature on sustainable transportation, and combines this with the results of interviews on sustainable transportation with key governmental and non-governmental organizations. The first chapter summarizes some of the trends that have led researchers and other commentators to conclude that transportation has become unsustainable. It reviews the most serious impacts of unsustainable trends in transportation, including health impacts and global climate change, and also addresses the relative contribution of different modes to the unsustainability of transportation in Canada. Chapter 2 outlines elements of analysis as well as policy and program development, describing broad tools that have been used or considered in policy development for sustainable transportation. Chapter 3 summarizes specific policy options that have been studied and/or implemented in Canada and internationally, and describes associated jurisdictional and timing issues.

Synthèse de la recherche technique et possibilité de l'appliquer au renouvellement des infrastructures linéaires

Cette étude porte essentiellement sur les infrastructures linéaires, terme désignant les prises d'eau et les stations de traitement de l'eau, les canalisations d'eau, les robinets, les pompes et les raccordements à la maison, de même que tous les réseaux de collecte des eaux d'égouts séparatifs et pluviaux, les réservoirs de retenue et les systèmes de traitement et d'évacuation des eaux. L'étude porte sur un large éventail de matériaux, de pièces d'équipement et de stratégies de gestion conçus pour améliorer la performance des infrastructures linéaires et traiter des techniques et des démarches qui pourraient servir à constituer une base d'information sur la technologie disponible. En plus de relever les innovations technologiques reliées aux infrastructures d'eau et d'égouts présentement disponibles au Canada et ailleurs, le rapport résume les opinions les concernant, de sorte que les administrateurs municipaux, les ingénieurs et d'autres intervenants pourront comprendre la façon d'en tirer profit. Les questions relatives aux codes, aux cahiers des charges et aux autres mécanismes selon lesquels des méthodes et technologies efficaces peuvent être mises en oeuvre lors du renouvellement et de la réfection des infrastructures font aussi l'objet de l'étude.

Afin d'identifier les micro-organismes pouvant biodégrader des explosifs, plusieurs essais en microcosme doivent être réalisés. Il est cependant difficile de quantifier adéquatement le bioxyde de carbone provenant du matériel énergétique de celui provenant d'autres sources de carbone présentes dans le microcosme. Une méthode beaucoup plus efficace consiste à biodégrader des composés radioactifs marqués au carbone 14. La plupart des matériaux énergétiques marqués au carbone 14 n'étant pas disponibles sur le marché, on a synthétisé du TNT, du RDX, de la NC et du PAG marqué. Ce rapport décrit les protocoles retenus ou établis et discute des rendements obtenus. ### The Taxing question of savings : should retirement savings be taxed?

By Jack M. Mintz and Thomas Wilson. Montreal : Institute for Research on Public Policy, 1996. 20 p. : Bibl. (Choices / Institute for Research on Public Policy ; Vol. 2, no. 5 ISSN 0711-0677) At head of title: Public finance.

Analyzes tax incentives for retirement savings in the broader context of general savings and their role in the economy. The first section discusses the economic impacts of taxing savings, including intertemporal impact of savings taxes, portfolio allocation impacts, effect of taxes on other decisions (particularly labour supply), and impacts on distribution of income and wealth. The second section considers specific measures that would increase taxes on savings, examining whether such measures would improve both economic performance and fairness in the tax system. Such measures would include taxation of retirement savings plan income, elimination of certain capital gains exemptions and of the dividend tax credit, and limitations on deductibility of interest expenses.

Describes a project to examine glacial dispersal and the effectiveness of till geochemical studies in localizing zones of high mineral potential in areas of variable overburden thickness. The study area was located in the Nechako River map area, west central British Columbia. In addition, the project compared the geochemistry of till samples with samples previously collected from the B and C soil horizons. Three sites in the study area were examined: the CH mineral property just west of Chutanli Lake, the Blackwater-Davidson property on the north slope of Mount Davidson, and the Uduk Lake property. For each property, the surficial geology and the observed alteration and mineralization are discussed, geochemical results are presented and interpreted, and the till and soil geochemical survey results are compared. Finally, the till dispersal patterns at the three properties are compared, potential sources of geochemical anomalies are identified, and reasons for differences in dispersal patterns on the three properties are discussed. Appendices include tables of geochemical data.

to expand on the geochemical properties of Labrador till, the silt and clay-sized fraction of archived till samples were subjected to a second round of geochemical analysis by inductively coupled plasma atomic emission spectrometry and instrumental neutron activation analysis. The results of these analyses comprise the basis for this report, which includes: a summary of the Quaternary geological framework for drift prospecting in Labrador, including bedrock geology and ice flow history; sample location and geochemical data along with estimates of analytical accuracy and precision; geochemical maps showing distribution of selected elements considered to be of direct relevance to mineral exploration; and limited interpretation of the data.

There is a growing consensus that the federal status quo cannot hold, that Quebec federalists must be able to offer concrete reforms if they are to have any chance of winning the next sovereignty referendum. At the same time, there is a growing pessimism about the prospects of formal constitutional change. Consequently, incremental change pursued through conventional political processes has become the dominant reform strategy. This commentary examines two options within this strategy and the principal components of the strategy: re-balancing the Canadian federation, national standards, equalization, intergovernmentalism, and public support. The dependency of incrementalism on prior constitutional negotiations is discussed along with the dependence of the outcome of incrementalism on the process adopted. The final sections discuss the limits on incremental reform, the sequence of reform, and the incremental strategy in the new Canadian vision.

This study was designed to assess the analytical variability among laboratories contributing to the Integrated Atmospheric Deposition Network, a joint Canada-US effort to identify toxic airborne substances in the Great Lakes basin, quantify atmospheric loadings of these contaminants, and define spatial and temporal trends in their deposition. This report presents the procedures used and the results from an interlaboratory performance study in which each participating laboratory received a set of ampouled standards ready for direct instrumental analysis, each containing various concentrations of eight different trace metals. Results presented include mean and median concentrations measured for each parameter, standard deviation, and difference from target versus concentration in ampoule.

Trading up : the impact of increased continental integration on trade, investment, and jobs in Canada

By Daniel Schwanen. Toronto : C.D. Howe Institute, 1997. 32 p. : ill., Bibl. (Commentary / C.D. Howe Institute ; no. 89) At head of title: Trade policy. ISBN 0-88806-349-0

This commentary discusses issues raised in Canada about globalization and the effects of international trade agreements, in particular the Canada-US Free Trade Agreement (FTA) and North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA). A key analytical tool in the form of a review of trade flows is used to determine whether a higher volume of trade and a greater degree of industrial specialization in trade is occurring as a result of those agreements. Issues examined include the industrial impacts of the agreements, whether the agreements are functioning as intended, whether they are encouraging investment, and the relationship of the implementation of those agreements to Canada's record of job creation and productivity. Comparisons are made with pre-FTA trends and between merchandise exports liberalized and not liberalized by FTA and NAFTA.

Victoria : Ministry of Forests, Aboriginal Affairs Branch ; British Columbia Forest Service, 1996. 100 p.
MICROLOG 97-03537 (2 fiche)

A Traditional Use Study (TUS) in British Columbia is a tool to identify sites, on land or water, holding significance to a cultural group. The TUS Program, whose goal is to promote the collection and mapping of First Nations traditional use information, recognizes the value of identifying and evaluating traditional use sites (which may or may not contain archaeological evidence) for the purpose of resource management planning. This document presents guidelines in three parts for those First Nations interested in submitting proposals for TUS funding from the Ministry of Forests. The first part provides information on proposal descriptions and format, standard TUS project phases and methodology, and budget and report formats. The second part is a guide to the recording of data about traditional use sites and includes a detailed inventory form. The third part details the technical specifications for traditional use sites databases.

Transmission capacity metric for SPF routing in ISO 10589 (U)

By Claude Bilodeau. Ottawa : Industry Canada, Communications Research Centre, 1996. ix, 20 p. : Ill., Bibl. (CRC technical note / Communications Research Centre (Canada) ; 96-004)
MICROLOG 97-03566 (1 fiche)

The ISO 10589 Intermediate system to Intermediate system (IS-IS) protocol specifies that the shortest path first algorithm must be executed by routers for calculating the optimal path to a destination system within a routing domain. The algorithm combines the metric (cost) values of the links by simple addition. By default, metric values associated with the capacity of the circuits are understood by every IS in a domain and are used in performing the default path cost calculations. This report shows that such an approach will normally lead to sub-optimal routing. The report develops two indicators to assess the routing bias introduced by various throughput-based routing metric functions. Numerical results are presented for selected suites of 2- and 3-hop topologies, composed of high frequency, ultra high frequency, and/or super high frequency radio sub-networks.

Reviews the approaches used in long-term performance assessments to determine the impact of sorption in the geosphere on retarding the movement of radioactive contaminants. The assessments reviewed were the Atomic Energy of Canada environmental assessment of the Whiteshell Research Area, the TVO-92 assessment conducted in Finland, the PNC-H3 project from Japan, the SKI Project-90 and SKB-91 assessments performed in Sweden, the Kristallin-I assessment done in Switzerland, and the British NIREX-95 assessment. In each of these, the effect of sorption in the geosphere on contaminant transport was assessed using an empirical approach to quantifying sorption coefficients. Contaminant transport was modeled using a continuous porous medium approach or a dual-porosity approach, both approaches describing contaminant retardation by a retardation factor. Sorption values used in the assessments are compared and differences between the values selected for similar materials and geochemical conditions are noted, particularly for redox-sensitive elements.

Five operational energy-from-waste plants in Ontario produce about 80,000 tonnes of ash annually. This report reviews the characteristics of the bottom ash and fly ash produced in these plants, along with the technologies that could be used to reuse the ash in environmentally acceptable ways. Technologies reviewed include solidification, stabilization, encapsulation, vitrification, acid extraction of metals, glassification, and reuse in various kinds of building materials. Criteria for ultimate disposal in landfills are also outlined. The appendix includes information on US experimental projects reusing ash and on ash disposal practices in Europe and Japan.

Tundra esker systems and denning by grizzly bears, wolves, foxes and ground squirrels in the Central Arctic, Northwest Territories

By Fritz P. Mueller. Yellowknife : Dept. of Renewable Resources, 1995. ix, 68 p. : ill., Maps, Bibl. (File report / Northwest Territories. Dept. of Renewable Resources ; no. 115)

MICROLOG 97-03690 (1 fiche)

Esquers, or ridges of sub-glacially deposited rock material, are prominent topographic features in the tundra of the central Northwest Territories. It is hypothesized that in tundra regions of the Canadian Shield, animals will den almost exclusively on glaciofluvial habitat such as eskers, due to their suitability for burrowing. Industrial activity such as mine development, which would require extraction of granular materials and possible alteration or removal of eskers, thereby adversely affecting the habitat of denning species. This report examines the role of esker habitat in the denning ecology of five species (grizzly bear, wolf, red fox, arctic fox, arctic ground squirrel) in the Lac de Gras area. It describes characteristics of esker den sites and the soil and vegetation modifications that take place via animal activity at den localities, and compares characteristics of esker den sites with control sites to determine whether den sites are different from other areas on eskers. It also compares the dens and den site characteristics among the five species and makes recommendations for identifying esker habitat sites and for impact mitigation at eskers that are exploited industrially.

Second-growth peatland black spruce stands typically possess an uneven-aged structure, suggesting that uneven-aged management may be a possibility. This report describes a project initiated near Cochrane, Ontario to examine the feasibility of the selection silviculture system in second-growth peatland black spruce stands last harvested 64 years ago. A cut-to-length harvesting system was used to harvest at light, medium, and heavy intensities during winter 1994. Structural and mensurational characteristics of the stands before and after harvest are described, damage to residual trees and advance growth is examined, and the biological feasibility of selection silviculture in the type of stand studied is assessed.

The improvement is required to enable the VAST program to analyze the natural frequencies of ship structures including fluid added mass. Improvements discussed include implementation of an out-of-core equation solver, removal of co-ordinate system constraints, development of a nonsymmetric eigenvalue solver algorithm, independent fluid/structure node numbering, triangular surface panel elements, and incorporation of the new capabilities into the MAESTRO program. Results are presented from a series of numerical trials used to verify the formulation of the triangular panel elements and the eigenvalue algorithm.

Describes a plant investigation and process evaluation study conducted at the St. Catharines Water Treatment Plant to review the present conditions and determine the optimum strategy for contaminant removal at the plant, with emphasis on particulate materials and disinfection processes. Sections of the evaluation report cover the source of raw water for the plant; flow measurement methods; process components, including pumping equipment, and chemical systems; plant operations such as flow control, chemical dosage control, quality control, and operational and process concerns; and plant performance, including turbidity removal, treatability testing, and disinfection efficiency. Concludes with recommendations regarding short-term modifications. The appendix includes tables of operational data.

Water quality in British Columbia : objectives attainment in 1995

Victoria : Ministry of Environment, Lands & Parks, Water Management Branch, Water Quality Section, 1997. viii, 120 p. : Maps ISSN 1195-6550
MICROLOG 97-03542 (2 fiche)

This report presents the results of monitoring to check the attainment of water quality objectives in a number of basins. The results are summarized in tables. The report indicates where conditions are acceptable and provides a warning of where further evaluation may be needed. Various variables were chosen for testing. Following the description of the program, the text presents the results of the quality assurance program. It then gives a provincial overview of the attainment monitoring results, and ends with the tabulated data for each body of water, by region.

Water vapor transfer through a hydrophilic film at subzero temperatures

By Randall J. Oszcewski. North York, ON : Defence & Civil Institute of Environmental Medicine, 1996. 6 p. : Ill., Bibl. In Textile Research Journal : vol. 66, no. 1, 1996.
MICROLOG 97-03077 (1 fiche)

Describe experiments designed to simulate the diffusion of water vapour through a clothing shell from a coating of ice on its inner surface. The experiments measured the water vapour diffusion resistance of the hydrophilic component of Gore-Tex II fabric at temperatures down to -24 degrees C, and examined the possibility that the effects of low temperature and relative humidity are synergistic.

Weathering steel : performance of test coupons over a ten-year period of environmental exposure

By Frank Planca. Downsview, ON : Ministry of Transportation, Research & Development Branch, 1997. iii, 9 p.
MICROLOG 97-03321 (1 fiche)

Presents results of long-term outdoor corrosion tests performed on coupons of uncoated atmospheric corrosion resistant (ACR) steel (also called weathering steel) in a variety of environments representative of those in which Ontario bridges are situated. About 50 coupons were exposed at five separate sites over a ten-year period, and data were compared to findings from other jurisdictions. Corrosion rates were categorized and the performance of blast-cleaned coupons was compared to that of mill-scale coupons. The results are intended to help the bridge owner or designer make better informed decisions on the appropriate use of ACR steel for new bridges, and in the maintenance and rehabilitation of existing bridges.

Weld metal and heat-affected zone toughness of HY 100 and HSLA 100 weldments

By J.A. Gianetto, W.R. Tyson and J.T. Bowker. Dartmouth, NS : National Defence, Research & Development Branch, Defence Research Establishment Atlantic, 1996. iii, 37 p. : Ill., Bibl. (DREA contractor report / Defence Research Establishment Atlantic ; DREA CR/95/499)
MICROLOG 97-03092 (1 fiche)

The main objective of this study was to assess the weld metal and heat-affected zone (HAZ) fracture behaviour for a series of submerged-arc welds produced in HY100 and HSLA100 steels. The toughness evaluation was carried out using one-inch thick dynamic tear fracture resistance specimens tested over a range of temperatures in order to establish weldment transition behaviour. The welds investigated were prepared using the same nominal energy input (2 kilojoules per millimetre) and included two submerged-arc narrow-gap welds and a conventional submerged-arc weld. Results presented include composition, mechanical properties, microstructure, and post-test metallography and fractographic analysis of the weld metal, as well as dynamic tear fracture resistance properties, microstructure, hardness, and post-test metallography and fractographic analysis of the HAZ.

Wellness and long-term care, a draft framework

Toronto : Ministry of Health, Long-Term Care Division, Policy Branch, 1995. 32 p.
MICROLOG 97-03454 (1 fiche)

The Ontario Ministry of Health is working toward a long-term care system that reflects a vision which diminishes dependence and disability, promotes health, and sustains wellness. This paper discusses how this holistic perspective can be built into the long-term care redirection now under way. It provides general guidelines for local planning and community wellness, with the intention of presenting the concept of wellness within long-term care and questions to ask in planning long-term care services at the community level, so that the redirected system will embody a wellness perspective. It includes discussion of what wellness is, elements of wellness, and the promotion of wellness in long-term care, and presents a wellness framework that outlines roles and responsibilities of various components of the health system.

Women, work and health inequalities, an analysis of the 1990 Ontario Health Survey : report

Mike Burke...et al. Toronto : Ministry of Health ; Premier's Council on Health, Well-Being & Social Justice, 1993. 68 p. : Bibl. (Working paper / Ontario. Ministry of Health ; no. 3)
MICROLOG 97-03456 (1 fiche)

Examines five dimensions of health: self-rated or subjective health status, sense of well-being, number of health problems, utilization of physicians' services, and involvement in health-promoting behaviours. Analyzes, using a multivariate design, the main effects of gender on health relative to the effects of work/occupation and other social determinants. The sample analyzed is a sub-sample of 3,000 respondents drawn randomly from those individuals aged 16 or older responding to the 1990 Ontario Health Survey. Also examines the possibility that gender interacts with other factors to produce significant effects on health.

Northwest Territories Department of Education, Culture and Employment...et al. Yellowknife : The Depts., 1995. viii, 59 p. : //.
MICROLOG 97-03124 (1 fiche)

This document proposes a new vision for healthier communities in the Northwest Territories. It begins with an overview of the process behind the development of a community wellness strategy in the Territories, including the need to address family violence as part of this strategy. This is followed by an introduction to the characteristics of community wellness as described by participants in a workshop, and by highlights of four areas of change identified: prevention, healing, and treatment; education and training to build skills at the community level; interagency collaboration to use resources more effectively and efficiently; and community empowerment. The final section describes government action to be taken towards achieving community wellness. The appendix includes case histories of some successful community wellness projects in the Northwest Territories.

MICROLOG 97-03434 (1 fiche)

This document presents the final report of the Comprehensive Health System Planning Commission of Health. In responding to its mandate, the commission has accepted the values and principles, together with the strategic framework, objectives, and targets, of the Premier's Council on Health Strategy. Through operationalizing the Premier's Council framework, the Commission has prepared a 10-year plan for meeting the special health care needs of the Southwest Region. It has developed a structure of governance and administration required to implement the plan and provide for the ongoing management of health care in the region. Finally, the Commission has quantified the plan so far as possible, so that its dimensions may be understood and, subsequently, evaluation of its achievement can be made. Conclusions implicit in the Commission's plan are also presented.

Zero tolerance for violence, a status report

Yellowknife : Dept. of Justice, 1994. 19 p. : Bibl.
MICROLOG 97-03200 (1 fiche)

In 1994, the Northwest Territories Legislative Assembly adopted the principle of zero tolerance for domestic violence. This paper discusses what is being done and what will be done to make zero tolerance a reality in the Territories. It begins with discussion of the available financial resources for addressing violence and the need to attack the root causes of violence at the community level. This is followed by a review of the Community Wellness Strategy that uses a holistic approach which empowers the community to achieve physical, emotional, mental, and spiritual well-being in the community. The strategy includes participation by women's groups, training and support elements, and a public information campaign. The paper also reviews what the justice system is doing to achieve zero tolerance via initiatives with regard to crime victims, child sexual offenders, Criminal Code amendments, and restraining orders. Finally, it examines housing initiatives to ensure that the victim and not the offender can stay in the family home, and to ensure that violent conduct in the political leadership is not tolerated.
